

ACADEMIC DRESS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA

The colourful ensemble of gown, hood (worn over the shoulders) and cap or mortarboard worn by graduands and members of the academic procession has deep historical roots. The gown can be traced to medieval times when the first universities were established in Bologna, Paris, and later in England at Oxford and Cambridge during the twelfth century. The hood linings around the shoulders were developed in England. The original function of the hood linings was to keep the wearer warm. The mortarboard caps originated in the seventeenth century when oversized mushroom-shaped hats were worn at Oxford and Cambridge. However, this style of hat became so loose and large that the corners would droop over the face of the wearer. Subsequently, a board was placed inside for support, evolving into the caps we see worn today. By 1770, the tassel was added.

Most universities and colleges in Canada, including the University of Manitoba, follow the British tradition of academic dress. The gowns, hoods and caps are patterned after the styles of academic dress at Oxford and Cambridge universities. Further to the British tradition, each institution has its own unique code of academic costume. This differs from the American practice where the style and colour of gowns, hoods and caps for bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees are specified in the Intercollegiate Code. While some Canadian institutions have partially adopted the code of the American system, the Canadian tradition embodies diversity amongst its academic collegiate.

The academic dress for the Université de Saint-Boniface, St. Andrew's College, St. John's College, St. Paul's College and University College are identical to that prescribed by the Senate of the University of Manitoba. Graduands who receive certificates or diplomas wear a bachelor's gown with no hood. In 2012, the University of Manitoba approved the establishment of academic stoles for diploma programs. Distinctive stoles for diploma programs are worn over gowns.

This chart contains the academic dress for bachelor's, master's, doctoral, and honorary degrees at the University of Manitoba, as well as the stoles for diploma programs, and the gowns for the Chancellor and the President and Vice-Chancellor.

Doctor of Philosophy		The first Doctor of Philosophy degree (in Agriculture) was conferred in 1928. For the next four decades, graduands donned a master's gown to receive their Ph.D. degrees. In 1968, the University of Manitoba adopted its own Ph.D. gown. The gown is made of a black material. Its style is similar to the Ph.D. gowns for American universities. The University of Manitoba's signature on this gown is the red velvet panel around the neck and the front, and the three red velvet bands on the bell-shaped sleeves. The hood is green.
Master's Degrees		The University of Manitoba has patterned its master's gown after the Oxford Master of Arts gown, which is made of a black material. Its distinctive feature lies in the T-shaped opening in the sleeves. The master's hood is the same shape, size and material as the bachelor's hood except there is no piled fabric edging. Hoods for each of the master's degrees have a distinctive coloured lining which folds back over the hood.

Indigenous Graduation Stole		A specially designed stole is presented to all Indigenous graduands who attend the Annual Traditional Graduation Pow Wow. The stole's main colour is purple, a colour of balance created by the blending of blue and red. In traditional teachings, women are represented by the colour blue (the colour of water) and men are represented by the colour red (the colour of fire). The yellow, red, white and blue ribbons represent the official traditional colours of Migizii Agamik that were determined through a traditional naming ceremony. The University's name and logo at the nape of the stole links the University to its Indigenous graduates and signifies the University's connection to their achievements.		2016
