Agronomy Assistant Cargill AgHorizons

Summer Opportunity (April/May 2012 to end August 2012):

Cargill AgHorizons Canada has summer opportunities available for Agronomy Assistants. The Agronomy Assistant plays an integral role in Cargill's CropSense consulting program, a service offered to help farmers improve their economic and environmental performance. The Agronomy Assistant inspects farmers' fields and creates reports of findings. The information gathered is used to help farmers make their in-season cropping decisions. There may also be opportunities to provide additional support at a Farm Service Centre.

Locations: Various locations across Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario.

Qualifications:

- Individuals looking for a challenging summer experience where they can develop technical and personal skills
- Good organizational skills, ability to work independently and learn quickly
- Self starter
- Students or graduates from Agricultural Science or Business degrees, or students from other disciplines who are interested in working in the agricultural industry
- A valid driver's license and clear driving record
- A farm background is an asset but not a necessity.
