Who may apply to present?

Any graduate student (in the Masters or Doctoral Program) currently enrolled in an Education graduate program or who has graduated since February 2017 (inclusive).

What topics will be considered?

Papers that relate to education will be considered. Students may give a presentation, no longer than 20 minutes, on their research conducted in the course of their graduate studies. Papers discussing issues and trends, “big picture” ideas, critical insights into theoretical matters or evaluations of policy will be considered. Papers may be presented either as a group effort or on an individual basis.

What needs to be covered in the proposal?

The attached form outlines the requirements for proposals and presentation options. Please complete and submit the form with your proposal.

How will the proposals be reviewed?

The organizing committee (which may include Faculty members and graduate students) will review the proposals. Acceptance will be based on scholarly merit; and clarity of research objectives, methods and proposed/established conclusions. Everyone who submits a proposal should be notified of their status by the first week of February 2018.

Will there be a published proceedings?

All presenters will have the option of submitting a paper for publication in an on-line electronic format on the Faculty of Education’s web site.

To be considered for publication, presenters must submit their completed/self-edited full papers electronically to the Education's Graduate Programs Office by Monday, May 7, 2018. More detailed information regarding the exact formatting of your final papers will be provided at a later date.
