Ceramic/Sculpture Studio Building

The Ceramic/Sculpture Studio Building was originally one of the most important buildings on campus, the Manitoba Agricultural College’s dairy barn. The barn was designed with permanence in mind and utilized a similar architectural style to that of Chancellor’s Hall. It was renovated for the School of Art in the mid-1970s to house several studio areas and offices as part of the Planning Office’s “BBG (Barn-Bubble-Gym) project”, whereby new space was provided in existing buildings.
