

A Guide to Education Costs and Funding Sources

For many students, thinking about going to university can mean worrying about money and student loans. At the University of Manitoba, we understand that the cost of an education is more than just tuition and books. Many students also have to pay for child care, trips back to their communities, food, shelter and other family expenses. The University of Manitoba's traditional commitment to accessibility includes providing many services and financial supports so that money is not a barrier to realizing a dream.

Every year, the University of Manitoba offers millions of dollars in scholarships and bursaries to new and continuing students. There are a variety of funding programs and many awards that may be of particular interest to Aboriginal (First Nation, Status, or Non-Status, Inuit and Métis) students.

In addition to handling federal and provincial student loans, emergency financial aid and a student food bank, the Financial Aid and Awards Office (422 University Centre – 474-9531) can help students apply for scholarships and bursaries that are available through the University of Manitoba. The Faculty of Graduate Studies can also help Master's and Doctoral students find funding for their research and studies.

Students can go to the Aboriginal Student Centre (537 University Centre, 474-8850) for information on financial issues such as child care subsidies, housing and job postings. The centre provides application information for many scholarships and prizes available through outside agencies such as national organizations, businesses, banks and media outlets. The staff at the Aboriginal Student Centre will help students find information about other sources of funding such as student aid, First Nations and Métis funding agencies and other support organizations.

The Department of Native Studies (204 Isbister, 474-9266) also provides support for Aboriginal students and has information on scholarships and programs of interest.

Students who want to work a few hours a week to earn some extra money can visit Career and Employment Services (474 University Centre, 474-9456) to find the program that suits their needs. There are job postings and workshops as well as a career resource centre. The University of Manitoba Work Study Program provides assistance for students with financial need through part-time campus employment. Some graduate students work as research or teaching assistants for professors or departments. These jobs are usually awarded on the basis of a student's grade point average. More than three thousand students work part-time on campus.

There are two licensed day care centres on the Fort Garry campus serving students who need child care services. The PlayCare Centre (109 University College, 474-6949) offers full-time, part-time and occasional spaces and the Campus Day Care Centre (15 Dysart Road, 269-7773) offers full-time and part-week spaces. Information about off-campus licensed child care spaces, as well as information about subsidy programs that can reduce child care costs, can be found by contacting the day care centres or visiting their web sites.

To save money on textbooks, the University of Manitoba Bookstore (First Floor University Centre) sells used books and students can resell many textbooks back to the bookstore.

The University of Manitoba's office of Housing and Student Life (108 Arthur V Mauro Residence, 474-6404) helps students find a place to live on or off campus. It helps students choose which type of housing suits their needs by providing an online searchable database of off-campus housing listings and information about the five student residences on campus: Arthur V. Mauro, Speechly/Tache, University College, St. Andrew's College and St. John's College. (Apply early for residences – April/May)
