1. ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Chair welcomed everyone and thanked them for joining the meeting. He welcomed President-Designate Michael Benarroch, who would be observing the meeting. He welcomed Nora Murdock to her first Board meeting since being elected by the alumni of the University to replace Jerome Knysh, whose term ended May 31. The Chair noted that Janet Morrill has replaced Mark Hudson as UMFA Assessor, and welcomed her to her first meeting.

The Chair said he wished to mark the occasion of Dr. Barnard's final Board of Governors meeting as President of the University and as a Board member. He noted that a number of guest have joined the meeting to help the Board recognize Dr. Barnard.

Mr. Lieberman welcomed Dr. Barnard's wife, Gursh, and thanked her for her contributions to the University of Manitoba and her support and encouragement of the President throughout his term. He said he was pleased to welcome back Chancellor Emeritus Harvey Sector and the five Board Chairs who worked with Dr. Barnard through his 12 years as President: Dr. Terry Sargeant, Dr. Janice Lederman, Senator Patricia Bovey, Mr. Justice Ted Bock, and Mr. Rennie Zegalski. He added that each would have an opportunity to speak momentarily.

The Chair noted that this is the end of an era, both for Dr. Barnard personally and for the University. He said the University has grown under Dr. Barnard's leadership, both in terms of structure and perception. He noted that during Dr. Barnard's term as President, the University has taken its place as a member of the U15 group of universities, and has increased its connections with local communities. He added that Dr. Barnard led the University in making great advances in relationships with Indigenous peoples and communities, while recognizing that the path of reconciliation is not a straight line. He said that Dr. Barnard has inspired us all to continue to work better and to do better.

Mr. Lieberman thanked Dr. Barnard for providing the Board with honest advice, strong leadership, and integrity, while demonstrating kindness and humility and staying true to the mission and ideals of the University. He added that, as Chair of the Board, he has appreciated Dr. Barnard's openness, honesty, warmth and his commitment to putting the best interests of the people of the University of Manitoba first. He expressed his thanks, on behalf of the Board, and said that Dr. Barnard will certainly be missed; however, we can take comfort in knowing that his contributions to the University and the Province will last long into the future. Finally, he expressed his hope that Dr. Barnard will have more time to enjoy the people and activities that bring him joy. He invited Chancellor Emeritus Harvey Sexter to speak.

Dr. Sexter offered the following comments:

I'm delighted to be here with so many distinguished has-beens. When I was first called about this I was reminded of an incident that occurred during the Front and Centre Campaign when the TD bank was making a gift to the University. Their deputy chair said he felt the most difficult position he had ever come across was that of the university president. As a former premier, diplomat, and corporate executive, he ought to have known. So now that David is stepping down after twelve years in that position at the University of Manitoba, people will inevitably ask "how well did he perform in this challenging position"? However, as a member of the 2007 Presidential Search Committee, I think the real question should be "how well did the Committee do in recommending David for the position of being the eleventh president of the University"?

In considering that, I was reminded of a presentation that I gave shortly before joining the Search Committee. It was to a group of young Winnipeggers, selected by the Chamber of Commerce, to be part of a new program in conjunction with the City of Winnipeg. They asked me to speak on the key elements of leadership. Not knowing much about it, I decided to do some research. I learned that confidence and courage instill confidence in others. Leaders are credible, trustworthy, and collaborative. More than just having a vision of the future, they encourage us to be more than we thought possible. Most importantly, they have great personal integrity and core values that keep them on track at all times.

In addition to those things that make a true leader, success requires being aware and sensitive to the time and setting we find ourselves in. Leading research into the essentials of leadership over the last 20 years claims that the fundamentals of leadership have been the same for centuries; however, while the content of leadership has not changed, the context certainly has and never more so since the beginning of the current century.

While David has done a remarkable job of applying the content of leadership, in a context that has been ever-changing, often challenging, and sometimes even hostile, I often fear that there may be too much rush to shower him with praise and appreciation when much of the real credit belongs to those that selected him as President; who spawned this diamond in the rough. They had the sense that a guy with degrees in religion and computer science could just be the right person at the right time to lead the University of Manitoba, if only he had a degree in law. He corrected that deficiency and went on to a remarkable career.

The University of Manitoba has grown in all the important dimensions during David's term as president and he leaves the institution with a clearer sense of where it is going, aspirations to get there, more resources to help it along the way, and more strongly connected to its alumni, students, and community than ever before. As Jeff said in his opening comments, the impact of David's term here will be felt for years to come. It is a legacy to be proud of. Thank you, David, for making this your home for the last twelve years and for making our search committee look so damn good.

God bless, be well, and best to you and Gursh for years to come. Thank you for this opportunity to be with you.

The Chair thanked Gursh Barnard, Dr. Barnard's wife, for her support and encouragement of David and through all his time as President.

Mrs. Barnard thanked everyone for what was an amazing and magical journey that they will talk about for a very long time. She said the relationships, the friendships, and the people they met have just been incredible, and she was thankful to be along for the most fantastic ride.

Dr. Sargeant offered the following comments:

The first time I met David was in Toronto when I was chair of the Presidential Search Committee that Harvey referred to a moment ago. I met David in the office of the headhunter who provided lunch for us and my job that day was to convince David, who had left the academy and returned to the private sector, to return to the academy and to become a candidate for our President position. We had a good discussion over the lunch. David talked about his experience, how he believed a university should work and how he might apply that to the University of Manitoba. We talked about his management philosophy and then, a little to my surprise, he pulled out a poem. Now, that should have been a red flag. If I had only known that I would subject the University of Manitoba to twelve years of poetry lessons through two convocations a year, each one two, three, four days long, and many other speeches. It even got to the point where if you passed him in the hall and just said hello or good morning, David would ask, “Do you just have a moment? I have a poem that I’d like to discuss”.

I guess it was a little too late to be a red flag, but I would agree with Harvey, the Committee great job. At times David would disagree with that, there were times where he questioned my intelligence, usually when introducing me to a colleague. We would be at a meeting somewhere in Winnipeg or another city and he would introduce me as the Chair of his Board, say that I wasn’t a bad Chair, that I was reasonably smart, and that I had a reasonably good track record, except for having hired him. Now, in all seriousness David, I am very proud of being a part of bringing you to the University of Manitoba. I can readily say that you have exceeded the hopes and expectations of myself and the Board that I led. Let me give one brief anecdote. Not long after we hired David, I ran into one of the finalists for the position who told me that we made the right decision.

I have also, over the years, made friends with you and Gursh, our common taste in music turned out to be a bonus. I want to thank you, David, for the dozen years you have spent at our university. From my perspective you have done an excellent job. Under your leadership, the University has continued to move forward. I have no doubt that you have left the University in great shape for Michael. You will be missed. I do hope that our paths cross, at least when the pandemic will allow us. Until then, Tag and I would like to wish you the very best with whatever you do. Hope to see you soon, David.

Dr. Lederman offered the following comments:

It is really a pleasure to do these kinds of things, particularly for David. I find it remarkable that David is only the 11th president of the University of Manitoba in its 144 year history. He soon will join a very select group of retired University of Manitoba presidents who have all done the enormous job of making the institution the strong place that it is today.

I want to reflect on two things, one of them is a little unusual so bear with me for a moment. When I look back on the things that were accomplished during David’s term, one of the things that he did in the first term was a thankless and humongous task of refreshing and rebuilding the University’s infrastructure of technology, systems, and processes. Infrastructure that had been delayed for many years and that really was the underpinning of the University’s work and lead to something that could mount the Front and Centre campaign. It was hard, a lot of work for people and many on the academic side were upset because programs and systems changed. This thankless task was so necessary and it really served the University well.

The other thing that I want to remark on, during my term David's commitment to working in partnership with the Board was really important and I think it built the collegiality that enabled some of the changes. I think that was a hugely important contribution to the University going forward.

On a personal note, when I was Chair of the Board for three years from 2012 to 2014, I believe David and I had a very strong relationship, which is essential to the management and governance of any University. We had wonderful conversations that I still miss and I will be sad to see you go David. I wish you and Gursh the very best in your future endeavours.

Senator Patricia Bovey offered the following comments:

Thank you Jeff, and hello David. For me to talk about David and about working with him in just three to four minutes is absolutely mission impossible. To start with, we have this multi-dimensional, pioneering, trailblazing, philanthropic, poetry-loving academic, who is at once a powerful, consultative, clear-headed, energetic, and supportive leader. Who is this man with whom I worked for 8 of my 9 years on the Board? Our joint path actually began before he arrived. Art was at its centre with his commissioning of Winnipeg artist Don Proch to create his presidential gift for honorary degree recipients and others with special university connections. His support of the arts at the University and throughout the community is truly appreciated. I think the University has been fortunate to have a president for the last twelve years who has always approached his role with a full 360 degree view. Layering his multiple insights, David challenged us all while rising to our challenges.

At our regular meetings David embraced every challenge, large and small, public and personal, from exciting futuristic ones to those deeply disturbing. David, your apology following the Truth and Reconciliation Commission was a high point. You tackled critical social issues too, both nationally and on campus. I applaud you. Then there was the exciting international competition for the design of the golf course. I won't be here in 50 years but the University of Manitoba will be, and the community will be much richer for your work.

The excitement with which David shared news of the many achievements of our students, faculty, and staff was palatable. Never afraid to tackle long-standing problems, I can attest to his tirelessness in ensuring the best possible education for our students and in his support for teaching and research. It was an honour to be part of the many buildings and upgrades to buildings on campus.

Personally, I thank you David for supporting my goals of risk management and monitoring strategies. Thank you too for agreeing to my request to extend your term as president. I asked for one year and you agreed to two, and so important were those two years.

David, my taking on the Chair with the campaign target was perhaps my greatest challenge. The goal was $350 million when I was asked, $400 million when I assumed the position, and $500 million, virtually the next day. These amounts were way beyond my experience. But David's leadership, his dedicated staff, and his stellar community team reached that target and shot it down. The over $600 million realized is a testament to your leadership, vision, and community and university-wide collaboration. Congratulations.

I also applaud your work with Universities Canada and in leading on many national issues. These last months, I know, have been particularly difficult and I am proud to be part of the Board alumni to witness how you have all met this challenge, among countless others. So David, thank you for your accomplishments, your forward thinking, and your unwavering commitment to our University's students and our province. Your love of the University of Manitoba and your real support of all of us in making these visions a reality will be missed. We are grateful. I wish you and Gursh a stimulating and healthy next chapter. Selfishly, I look forward to continuing our friendship. Bonne chance and bon santé mon ami.

Mr. Justice Ted Bock offered the following comments:

I am delighted to be taking part in this tribute to David. Students of Canadian history will understand when I describe myself as the Arthur Meighen of Board chairs. My time as Chair was short and this speech may actually exceed the length of my tenure there, and that's very unfortunate for me because I very much enjoyed the opportunity to work closely with David in that capacity. But I was on the Board for 7 years so I did have ample opportunity to observe David in action. Others will attest and have already, to what I saw. A tireless commitment to the U of M and its mission and a long list of significant achievements that speak to David's very effective leadership. And since others have already spoken of that, I thought I would focus on something else, a lasting memory of David, and that's his custom of reading a poem at almost every important function that David spoke at. I think it's funny that children learn to read and recite poetry, nursery rhymes are one of the ways that we're introduced to the written and spoken word. But as we grow up, many of us lose that connection to poetry. As a result, I think we lose a unique and powerful means of expressing ourselves, of communicating with others, and of achieving a deeper understanding of the world we occupy. David, happily, has never lost that connection to poetry. Nor has he ever lost sight of his connection to the University's mission, which, as much as anything, is to promote a deeper understanding of ourselves and the world we occupy. We've all heard him read poetry to mark important occasions, and so, on this important occasion I have a short poem that seemed apt for the occasion. As someone heads of, if not to retirement, I hope at least a slightly slower pace of life. It's very short, still, I would like to ask Jeff Leclerc or Jeff Lieberman to ensure that Terry Sargeant pays close attention. The poem is by Ron Padgett, an American Poet, called The Inaction of Shoes.

Inaction of Shoes by Ron Padgett

There are many things to be done today and it's a lovely day to do them in Each thing a joy to do and a joy to have done

I can tell because of the calm I feel when I think about doing them
I can almost hear them say to me
Thank you for doing us

And when evening comes
I'll remove my shoes and place them on the floor
And think how good they look sitting?... standing?... there
Not doing anything...

David, Lianne and I would like to wish you and Gursh all the very best. It has been a real pleasure working with you and thank you for your service to the University.

Mr. Zegalski offered the following comments:

Hello David and everyone on the Board. I appreciate the opportunity to say a few words. I started my Board term in 2008 at the same time David did. I was thinking back to those years and being fresh on the Board and he was fresh to Winnipeg and fresh to the University and thinking back to those years, those who were around recall some initiatives that were undertaken by David early in his time here. One was called ROSE Resource Optimization and Service Enhancement, and one was called OARS, Optimizing Academic Resources. It was a pretty tumultuous years back then, and if there's one thing I can describe, it's that David was certainly an agent for change. He immediately set to work to try to bring the University to a better place and that's something I'll always remember. In 2008, IG field was just a field we all drove by, just a soccer field, and within a short time, with David's guidance it became Investors Group Field. The other highlight for me, as Pat mentioned, was the Southwood Lands. During my nine years on the Board that whole planning project occurred and David was instrumental in guiding that and I think five years from now we'll look at that land and may see development of 100 acres. These things take time. I think we can celebrate southwood. It will be a legacy of David's for years to come. I hope David will be able to come back for the first ground breaking. These projects take decades to unfold. Thinking back, David, I'd like to thank you for your leadership over those twelve years. I think it will be a lasting impact on the University from these projects and others than have been touched on today. Again, thank you for the opportunity. Good luck to you and Gursh in all your future endeavours. On behalf with everyone I served with, thank you very much for your commitment and dedication.

The Chair noted that three special guests from David's office team were present; Ms. Kerry McQuarrie Smith, Ms. Jocelyn Striemer, and Ms. Holly Campbell. He thanked them and acknowledged all their help and support of David's success over the twelve years.

Chancellor Mahon offered the following comments:

David, I think few people are a marathoner and a sprinter, and you have been both. You have been a marathoner in the context of twelve years at the university and another ten at the University of Regina, so approximately 22 years as a University president. But I also think you have been a sprinter. I believe that the past four months have been nothing like you have had in your career. Nothing we have ever had in our lifetime. Not sprinting to the door, but sprinting where every day is full intensity and you need your full capacity all the time. I believe you have exercised these two very different sets of skills and I think that is an accomplishment.

I would like to speak briefly to three legacies that I think you will be leaving the University with, from my vantage point. For any of you I have not yet met, I've been Chancellor for twelve months and a few days. Speaking of those twelve months, I would like to commend you for commissioning two reports for the University: the Indigenous Senior Leadership Report, and the Sexual Violence Report. Those reports, the recommendations in them and that which is has been developed thus far are very important to the University community. For years to come, I hope and think, these recommendations will change the landscape, as they rightly should, for both people who are experiencing sexual violence, not only women, and also, our Indigenous community. These recommendations increase the power and the voice of those communities. The second legacy ties into this and it is the creation of the Vice-President Indigenous position and the selection of the very capable Dr. Catherine Cook to fill that role. This is really important and is groundbreaking for a Canadian university. And finally, I would like to acknowledge and thank you for the work you have done with your senior executive team on the pandemic, in reacting and adapting to it. It is very difficult work to lead a slow-moving institution in adapting quickly to an evolving crisis. The work you and your team have done is putting our University in position for whatever comes next.

David, to you I would like to say thank you.

The Chair noted that, under different circumstances, we would have gathered together for a big party. He said that with parties come gifts and we did not want to let this occasion pass without presenting you with a gift. On behalf of the Board and the University community, I am pleased to present you with a gift toward the purchase of a telescope. I know that you plan on pursuing star gazing in a more serious way now that you will have free time, and we wanted to help you get started. Thank you, David, for all you have given and all you have done in leading the University of Manitoba.

4.1.1 Presentation of the Annual Financial Statements

Mr. Osiowy stated that the Committee met on June 16 and received the Annual Financial Statements for information. Mr. Zapshala-Kelln introduced Mr. Pasieka, Acting Comptroller, who would give a high-level overview of the statements. She stated that the Office of the Auditor General did not identify any errors or control weaknesses and will issue an unqualified audit opinion. Mr. Pasieka said the statements begin on page 151 of the materials, and additional context is provided in the Management Discussion and Analysis (MD&A), beginning on page 133. He noted the Statement of Operations is now in a new format. In response to a question, Mr. Pasieka stated that the budget categories were unknown when the statements were prepared in 2019. He added that, going forward, the budget will include the actual figures.
