

RESEARCH AT THE STU CLARK GRADUATE SCHOOL

A research community committed to advance Reconciliation through Indigenous Business Scholarship

The I.H. Asper School of Business respectfully acknowledges that our campuses are located on the original lands of the Anishinaabeg, Cree, Oji-Cree, Dakota and Dene peoples, and on the homeland of the Métis Nation. We are committed to establish and maintain collaborative relationships with Indigenous peoples as we pursue reconciliation in a good way.

Universities across Canada are hiring Indigenous scholars in various faculties, including business

The I.H. Asper School of Business articulated Reconciliation through Indigenous Scholarship as a pillar in its recent 4 year strategic plan

A career in research and teaching will enable you to make positive changes that will benefit Indigenous communities across Canada and the world

Since 1994, Indigenous Business Education Partners have offered a suite of services and community for Indigenous students in pursuit of a business degree. Over 135 alumni are now making their mark on the world and changing their communities for the better.

An appropriate graduate research degree will allow you to make a difference in the academic research community and in the classroom. Other researcher career opportunities exist in the corporate sector.

We are committed to partnering with Indigenous students who are interested to pursue graduate research programs.

Funding for Indigenous research students

MSc students are eligible for up to $20,000 (CAD) per year for the first two years of study, while PhD students are eligible for up to $40,000 (CAD) per year for the first four years of study.

Low tuition fees

Pay approximately $14,000 (CAD) per year for the first year (for MSc) or first two years (for PhD), plus approximately $3,000 (CAD) total for the remaining years of study.

GMAT preparation assistance

Through funding from Canadian Western Bank, eligible prospective students may receive assistance to help prepare to write the GMAT exam, required for admission.

Supportive and diverse community

Among our faculty members you will find supportive professors who are committed to your success through your graduate research program.

Many of our professors are current and former members of our Committee for Indigenous Business Scholarship.

Fellowships will be offered to Indigenous graduate research students who have also become members of Indigenous Business Education Partners.
