

Knowledge development in aging

Are you a student interested in the topic of aging?

University of Manitoba students interested in being recognized for their professional development activities in aging are eligible for the Knowledge development in aging. Launching in Fall 2022, the Centre on Aging is providing students with the opportunity to supplement their knowledge in aging over the academic year and receive credit.

To get recognition for their professional development activities in aging, students will have to attend 6-one hour approved professional development events during the current academic year and submit a reflection form within two weeks of attending an event. Approved event hours will be officially noted as Knowledge in Aging Program Participant on a student's co-curricular record.
