Iñaki Alday (Zaragoza, 1965) and Margarita Jover, founded aldayjover architecture and landscape, in 1996 in Barcelona, an internationally awarded firm that faces works of public architecture and landscape with a common approach to the specific character of the place. aldayjover has designed some of the most important recent public spaces in Barcelona (Green Diagonal-Sagrera), Zaragoza (Water Park), or Pamplona (Aranzadi), as well as architectural pieces and landscapes (The Mill Cultural Center, DHC, or the Recovery of the Gallego river in Zuera). Currently, aldayjover is working in several locations in Spain and in Puerto Rico, in projects that combine heritage and new buildings, natural dynamics of rivers and public space and social dynamics. aldayjover has been awarded with the European Public Space Prize (2002), the FAO Prize (2009), the Urban Integration (2011), the nomination for the Mies van der Rohe EU award (2009), and a number of Spanish and Iberian prizes. In 2011, Iñaki Alday was appointed as the Quesada Professor and Chair of the Department of Architecture of the University of Virginia. Margarita Jover is the first Professor of Practice of Architecture at the UVa School of Architecture, where both are participating in the on-going evolution of the architecture program at the University of Thomas Jefferson, one of the first public universities in the United States.
