1. Course Description:
This course explores the history of working people’s struggles, victories and defeats, with attention to gender, ‘race’ and ethnicity. It surveys the origins and evolution of labour unions and workplace rights and the role of politics and social movements from the nineteenth century to the present. Challenging the ahistorical notion that working conditions and rights at work have improved ‘automatically,’ it investigates factors that have shaped the trajectory of change. These include the role of employers, the role of the state, and the effectiveness of working people’s strategies, from radical and extralegal to moderate and respectable. The course also introduces you to primary sources and explores the process by which historians create history.

2. Required Texts:

- Students are responsible for obtaining all required materials and are required to have prepared for the class by reading the material and prepared questions and comments.

5. Assignments:
1. Reading Responses (x3)
Length: 4-6 pages (1000-1500 words)
Due: Sign-up sheet to choose your three (3) dates will be available on 11 September. Papers must be submitted electronically to the drop box in UMLearn in Word format prior to the start of class on the due date. Hard copies must also be submitted. Late papers will not be accepted without prior approval. This assignment requires you to summarize, analyse, and compare the assigned readings, including graphic histories and media, for your chosen topic.
- Be prepared to share your analysis with your colleagues in class.
- Summarize each of the reading or media assignments in one paragraph each followed by a comparison of at least 1000 words that addresses their similarities and differences such as their use of sources, point of view, approach to the topic, and the overall accessibility of the story they tell.
- Despite the specific format, please treat this assignment like an essay and adhere to an essay format, including organizing your evidence around a central position or argument.
- Your argument (i.e., your position) must be clear, concise and logically consistent, and should demonstrate your awareness of your audience (your colleagues).
- Support each point of your comparison with evidence from the sources.
- I prefer that you avoid using quotations and instead write the assignment in your own words. But be careful to cite every idea, fact, or image from the sources using Chicago citation style correctly.
- Include a bibliography prepared correctly in Chicago citation style.
- In addition to handing in a hard copy of all written assignments, students are required to submit a copy of the paper electronically through UM Learn as a Word document, not a pdf. The file name for the document should be as follows: SURNAME Given name Assign # HIST 2200 or LABR 2200

Class Participation
Good class participation grades depend on students coming to class having read and thought about the required reading and being prepared to discuss the material in a thoughtful way. Participation marks reflect the quality of your questions, comments, and insights about the readings and your discussion on the topics with others.
