General Information

Description
This course is a global, economic, social, political and cultural history of the mid-twentieth century from the onset of the Cold War and decolonization to the collapse of the Soviet Union. We will explore the relationships between the capitalist core or “first world”, the socialist or “second world” and the countries emerging from colonialism or “third world”. We will also explore the social history of the period and the experience of life in the Cold War era. This is the second course in the History Department’s three course sequence in Modern World History from 1914 to the Present.

Delivery and Technology Requirements
This is a lecture and seminar-based course. Lectures will be synchronous and be conducted via Zoom. Seminars will involve small breakout groups within zoom. Students are expected to attend lectures, take notes and ask questions. Students are encouraged to have their cameras and microphones on in order to participate fully in the class. Both video and text chat will be in use in order to facilitate discussion. Lectures will NOT be recorded to view later so students must attend class.

All assignments are to be handed in via electronic format through UMlearn.

Students must have access to a computer that meets the U of M minimum system requirements

While regular attendance on-line is expected, if you experience unanticipated technical issues, family responsibilities, or illness that prevent attendance please contact the instructor. Students registered through Student Accessibility Services will be accommodated as per SAS recommendations
