Critical Perspectives on Gender and Health
3 cr. hrs.
Part of Term to be offered: May / June 2021 (May 10 – June 17)
Instructor: Deborah McPhail
This course explores gendered health issues from an interdisciplinary feminist perspective. Placing particular emphasis on the intersections amongst race, class, gender, and sexuality, this course explores how the contemporary concepts of “health” and “illness” have come to make sense in and through constructions of masculinity and feminity. Using feminist theories of gender and embodiment to examine a range of topics pertaining to health, this course requires students to question common-sense and bio-medical understandings of health and illness.

It will study program evaluation from a “real world” perspective, including the political and ethical issues related to evaluation. This course provides a strong theoretical foundation to evaluation common to family, health, and social development programs. Students will put this into practice by working with a particular agency/program to fully develop an evaluation plan to be actually used by the agency/program.
