I have received permission from the nominee to put their name forward for this award.

*You must receive permission for the nominee to be considered. Ask if anyone else is nominating them

Each candidate may only be nominated ONCE per year. Past recipients of the Indigenous Awards of Excellence are not eligible to win again.

If you are re-nominating a nominee from 2023, please ensure the nominee's information is up to date.

The nominee is aware that if they receive the award, they will be asked to be interviewed in order to have their story shared with the UM community.

By submitting a nomination, I consent to being contacted for an interview should my nominee receive the award.

Please provide a letter (up to two pages) that includes an Indigenous community connection statement for the nominee and explain the impact the candidate has made in relation to the nomination criteria. The Indigenous community connection statement helps the selection committee to understand the nominee's kinship ties and responsibilities to their nation (which might include family lines, community relationships, connections to place, citizenship, etc.). If a student is part of a group or participates in a program, please provide specific examples that describe the nominee's contributions. The selection committee will only consider information that is included in the nomination package, so please complete your nomination in full.

You may attach up to two one-page letters of support from students, faculty, staff, and/or community supporters to accompany the nomination. It is helpful to share the criteria with those providing the letters so that their examples are informed by the criteria. These letters offer an opportunity to show the contribution of the nominee from different perspectives. The impact of the letter is not weighted by the status of the individual providing the letter, but their ability to speak about the contributions the nominee has made.

Deadline – Friday March 1, 2024, at 4:30 p.m.
