LAW LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA
WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, CANADA
R3T 2N2

Jean Rene Allard

Jean is living proof that if you have a reference from the Governor-General and the Chairman of the National Law Reform Commission, you can get through Law School without reading a single case after Christmas of first year. Jean went through Law School so that he could establish his own private law consulting firm. His chief sources of information will, of course, be Casey and Bainbridge.

John Stewart Bainbridge

Before coming to Law School, John kept in shape by cutting his own firewood up North. For the past three years he has kept in shape by carrying a fellow student on his back. We all wish John a light and prosperous future.

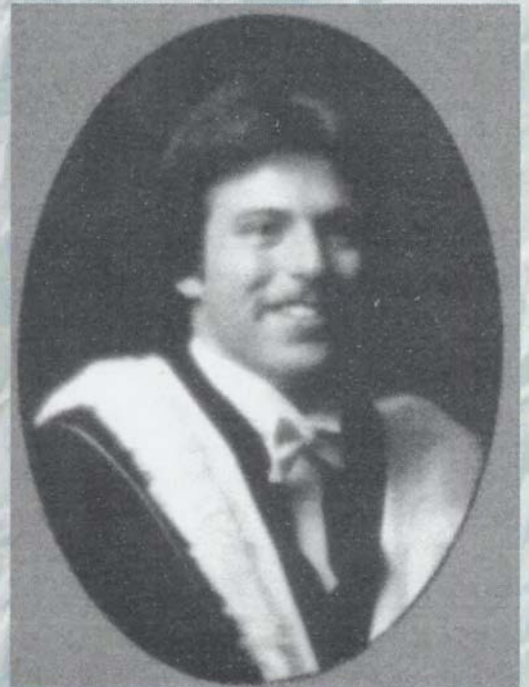

Barbara Judith Bates

Barb was usually seen in the library armed with five different coloured pens which she often put to use copying the Corporations Act. Barb was a pleasant addition to the class and was always concerned and never too busy to lend a hand.

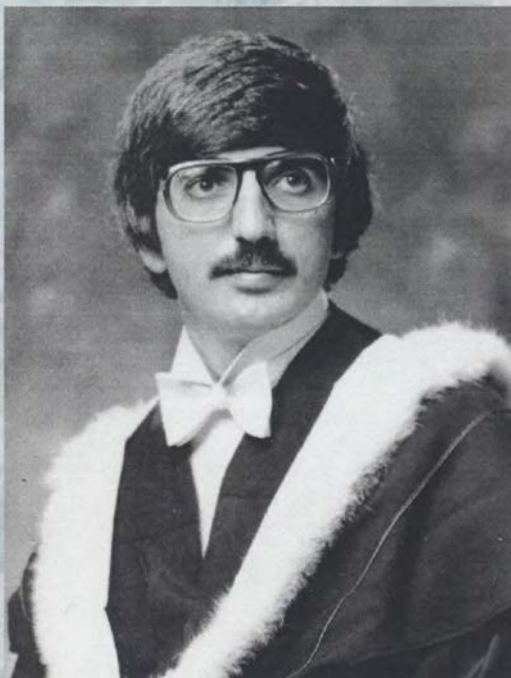

Gordon Charles Beaulieu

Gord loved to have impromptu parties. Sometimes he didn't even know he was having them. However, he will be able to look back fondly on the memory of Dilts et al crashing through the front door at 3:00 a.m. while he leads a sedate life in Portage (if life ever gets sedate for Gord).

Clyde Raymond Bond

Clyde has gone to work for the AG. He says the view is great from his office door. Clyde is the altruist of the class. He sacrificed his $50,000-a-year part-time job at Safeway as a cabbage attendant. Funny thing how all the pictures he took at beer and skits were crooked. Could have something to do with ensuring the subject was fully framed.

Alan Dennis Bourgeois

As a former civil servant, the amount of work required in law school was a greater jolt to Alan than to the rest of us. But, he adjusted really quickly and was one who could keep on top of everything and still always be smiling.

Gerald Joshua Boyaner

Gerald came back from down east and now wants to be a punk lawyer. He was a highlight of the brilliant "beer & skits" performances of 1979.

Patricia June Brownell

Pat was involved in everything that was going on - football, social club, grad, etc. So, she went to Greece after exams to learn how to relax. But, what's the point of relaxing when you could be doing something? Much browner and rested, she will head on to articles at Gallagher & Company.

Judith Ann Burch

Judy is the "total hostess" and to her and others' delight had great dinner parties. Judy was infrequently (like once a day) heard to say, "Let's go dancing." Her dream is to have the perfect disco dinner, complete with silver lamé tablecloth.

John Joseph Casey

In first year, John was going to save the world by setting up a storefront law clinic for the unfortunate. However, after three years he has reformed and now is going to own the world (for a similar metamorphosis see "English, Steve"). John, however, always was willing to give free "spirited" advice.

Richard John Curran

Rich was a most considerate individual whose writing was so bad he printed his notes in case anyone wanted to borrow them - or, of course, in case he wanted to read them at a later date. Unlike the majority of students who went directly to the library to study, he and others studiously went to the Montcalm. Obviously, this was the more rational approach because Rich did well and did not end up with fluorescent light burns.

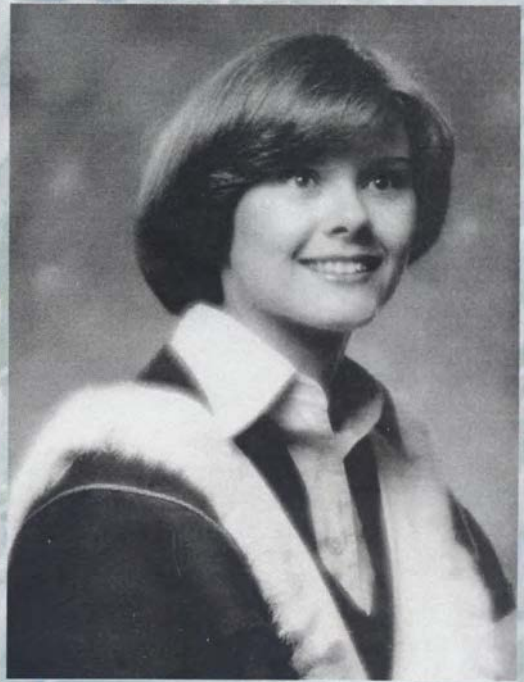

Ruth Patricia Davis

Ruth was an active member of Women and the Law and has the distinction of having walked out on a speech by the Great Harry. Ruth is getting married this summer and they are moving to Vancouver to live and raise a family. All the best.

Monique Louise Bicknell Danaher

As a calm member of the class, Monique now finds that life is getting wilder and wilder. However, there are indications of the requisite fighting spirit for law evidenced when she and Ms Duke took on Gerry Nemiroff.

Hal Howard Decter

After having struck it lucky in Winnipeg, Hal is on his way to striking oil. Frequently seen kicking law students out of the U.C. Thursday morning donuts. Hal balanced his political career and law studies very well. We hope Hal can afford to scrape by on the pittance he is earning articling.

Corrine Denise Theresa Deegan

Corrine has been a fun-loving classmate who is always ready for a good time. Her big smile, infectious laugh and great sense of humour were much appreciated. She'll be articling with the Provincial A-G next year where we are sure she will have much success.

Wesley Derksen

The Derksen Edwards conflicts were always a great source of enjoyment, especially when Wes beat the Dean at his own game by reading straight out of Cheshire to the class before the Dean could. Wes also was the founding member of the Edwardian style of Haberdashery featuring muscle shirts and cowboy boots. Wes was a very inquisitive person who persisted in posing in-depth questions.

Robert Edward Doyle

One wonders if Bob was cut out for the legal profession, as he has never been heard to say anything bad about anyone. Bob is a very pleasant fellow who soon shall be whistling while he works.

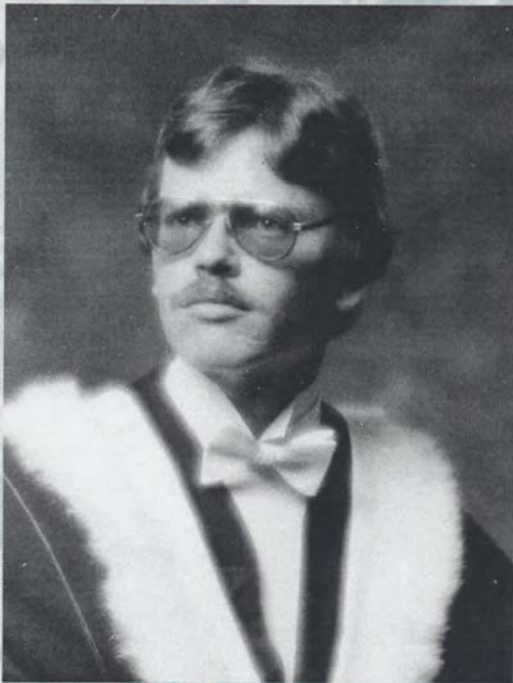

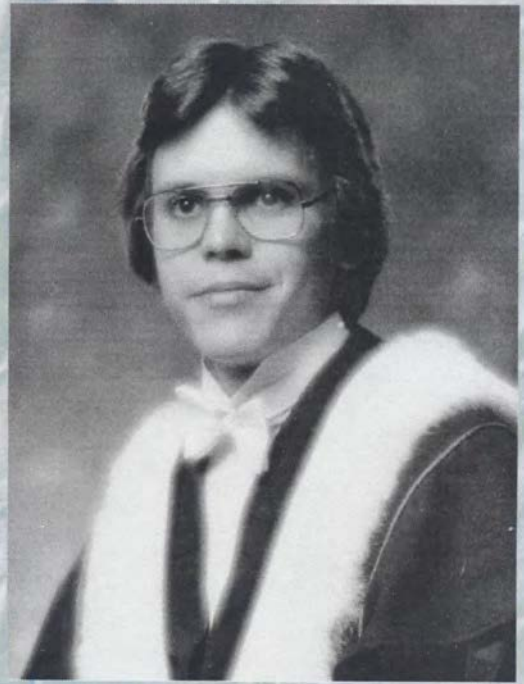

Valdyn Jonina Duke

Val, like Allard, Casey, Bainbridge and Curran, came into law school later in life after having pursued another career. Unlike them though, she is female and was actively involved in Women and the Law. Also, unlike them, Val attended school and is now articling while working full time raising kids - no mean feat in itself.

Stephen English

Steve was the socialist's socialist when he entered law school. He voted NDP, had long hair and said nasty things about Sterling Lyon and thought marriage was a farce. Steve has reformed. He bought a boring car, got his hair cut, got engaged and has buggered off to Edmonton to become a rich capitalist. His future - 2.2 children and a station wagon in the suburbs.

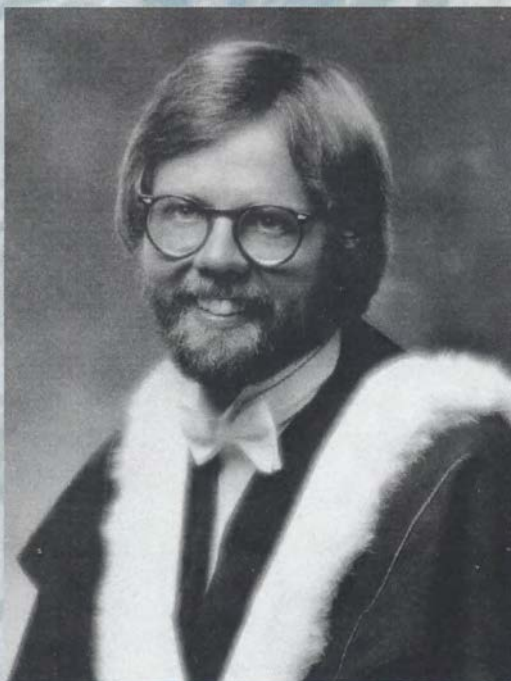

Timothy Paul Friesen

Tim had a job in Winnipeg, however, oil got in his eyes and so he has gone to Calgary. Tim was a quiet fellow in third year, but as one taking litigation, his nose was in report books a lot of the time. With the locks he has, he was seldom not seen.

Robert Thomas Gabor

Rob has a perpetual cold and hence is a leading authority on how to get rid of one (he just keeps getting them back). As one of the back row gang in C and CT, Rob should never have heard a thing that Braid said. However, one day he caught something about S.21.3 Sale of Goods. The next two weeks he spent trying to figure out what the Act said, why Braid said that's what the Act said ... why the Act did not say what Braid said it did ... We told you, you should not have listened, Rob!

William Sveinn Gange

One of the resident musicians of the class, Bill often wondered why he was in law school. However, international bolstered his faith in the academic life and legal education. Bill will best be remembered for the stirring lyrics in "I worked My Bleeding Guts Out For You" inspired by a pillar of the legal education process. (See Fainstein, Lisa, supra).

Barbara Claire Gessner

Barb always was able to remain calm amid the turmoil, which abounded at school. Barb was an active volleyball player and netted a job with Newman, McLean (who says they don't hire women?).

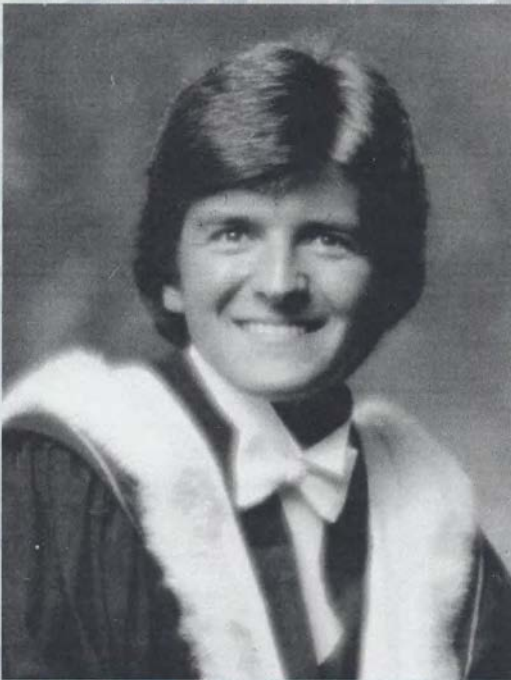

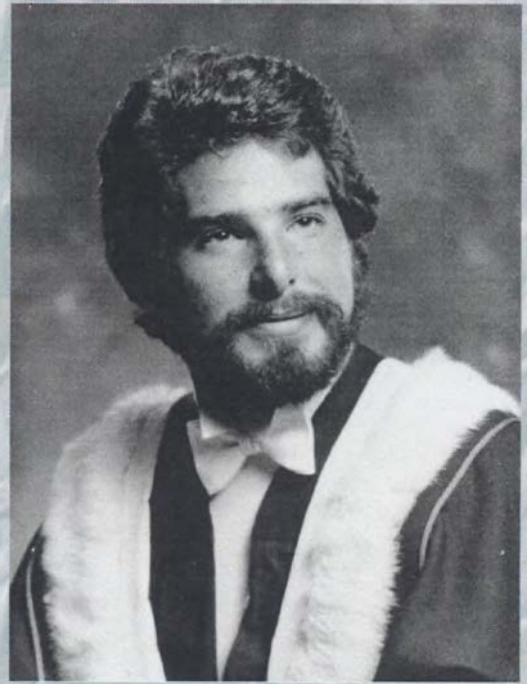

Heidi Dora Giesbrecht

Heidi was involved in every sports activity possible and was frequently found at the Legal Aid Office. Unfortunately, she had to give up coffee breaks, another favorite pastime, but with all her energy, who needs coffee?

Monty Farrel Goren

Our nomination for the "Roland Penner of the Year Award," Monty was one of the polished performers at Beer and Skits. No ... he did not sleep all the way through law, he just likes having his eyes two inches from the paper while taking notes. He should give up Legal Aid, work on his impression of Gerry Mercier and apply for Attorney-General.

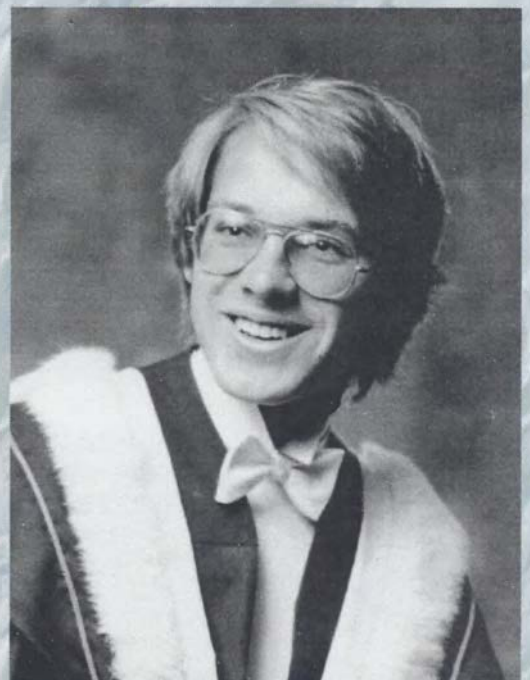

Barry Lee Gorlick

Barry is going to buy a lime green corvette to match his favorite suit. Like Rene Simard, Barry may be asked to be guest lecturer in a new course - Mistrial 45:347, commonly known as "Justice Calls." Barry owes his great success and getting his shoes on the right feet to Vera.

Mark Mctaggart Gray

Mark must have had an exceptionally busy nightlife because he was often see sleeping through classes. However, he only pretended to sleep through tax, as his sleep was interrupted by being able to interpret section 85(1) rollovers. A great curler, Mark could usually be found at the Granite at 4:00 on Friday with beer in hand!

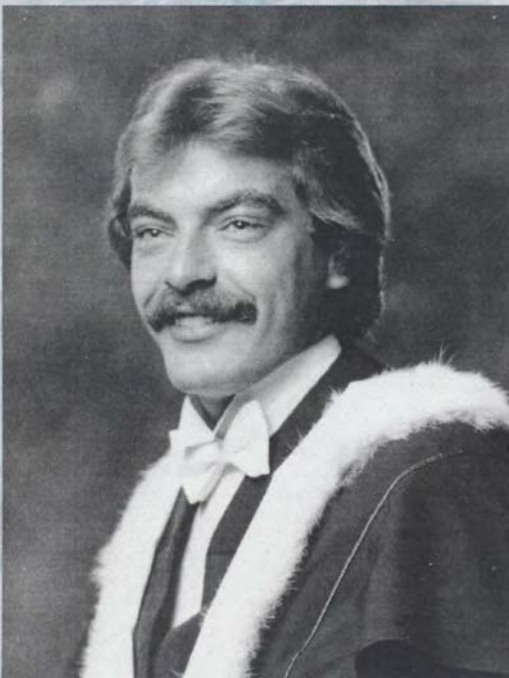

Michael William Gumprich

In anticipation of his impending appointment to the bench, Michael would like to thank the following: Gerry Hawranik, Corrine Deegan, Janice Tokar, in cooperation with Xerox of Canada Limited. Michael will soon be able to put his socio-psychological approach to law to use trying to figure out how to help all those criminals off the street.

Irene Aleda "Dean" Hamilton

The Ms Logan of Robson Hall, calm, never rattled, but could not talk in Nemiroff's Insurance class. Her passion is planning chili parties. "Beanie" hopes to follow in her father's footsteps, but her feet may be too long. "She is fit for the porpoise." Kept her maiden name so everyone would know whose daughter she is.

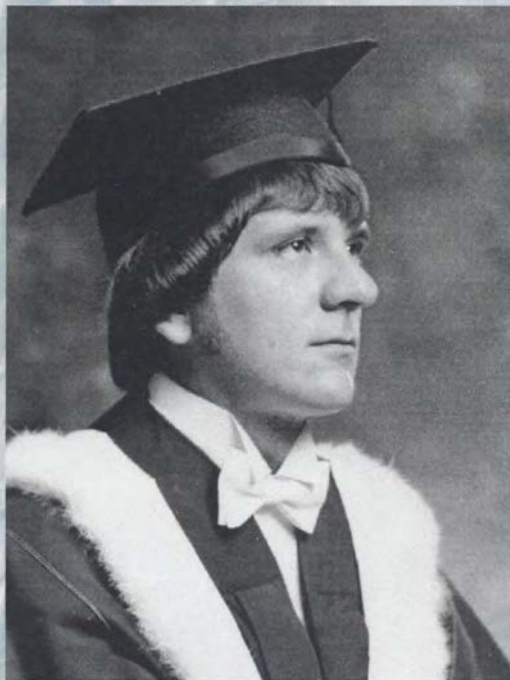

Kenneth Dale Harvey

Dale (Cam) left his closet at Queen's to join us in second year. Apparently, proficient in baseball, his fastball prowess has been confirmed by a reliable source. After a clandestine love affair, Dale decided that he should only write one exam in April.

Gerald Charles Hawranik

Gerry is the only one in the class dedicated enough to drive in from Beausejour everyday. Known as the "Fred Astaire" of law school, but affectionately known by Gumprich as "Coles Notes." Gerry is articling in Beausejour now, but we'll look forward to seeing him on Fridays (he just can't get away from that drive).

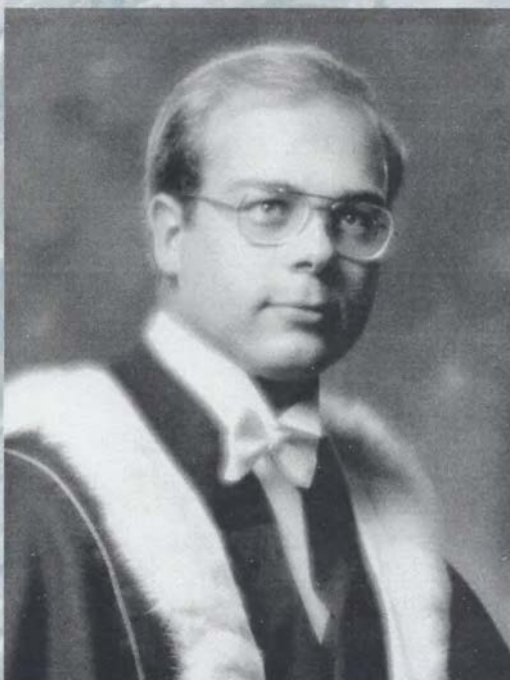

Harold Arthur Henning

As anchor for the Beer and Skits beer chugging team, Harold could outdo anyone. Harold was really good to go through school with because he was unflappable and always had a smile on his face. However, that may have been deceiving as he thought even Clyde's jokes were funny. The only thing Harold regrets about becoming a lawyer is that Bar Ad does not offer a water skiing course each summer.

Jacob Louis Henteleff

Cobber's greatest enjoyment in school was matching wits with the Dean and being able to interpret all those catchy Latin maxims the Dean used to demonstrate how stupid we all are. Cobber also enjoyed the formal occasions during the year so he could have out his grandfather's tuxedo, which Cam Harvey thought was the latest. As captain of U of M rifle team, Cobber boasts an arsenal that would put the U.S. Defence Department to shame.

Patricia Vivian Hilder

Viv is one of the most competent people around - she is involved in everything, works hard, contributes and always has time to talk. Viv could often be found partying to the bitter end, and occasionally to daybreak. She was a pleasure to have gone through law school with.

Richard Allen Paul Holmes

Quiet, but daring. Who else would have the courage to sleep through an entire Personal Property class with D.A.Cam staring at him the whole time. Rick enjoyed curling this year - however, he often seemed to be enjoying the après-curling activity even more. Finally, introduced his fiancée to us - and he didn't even have to eat any of his words! (See English, Steve.)

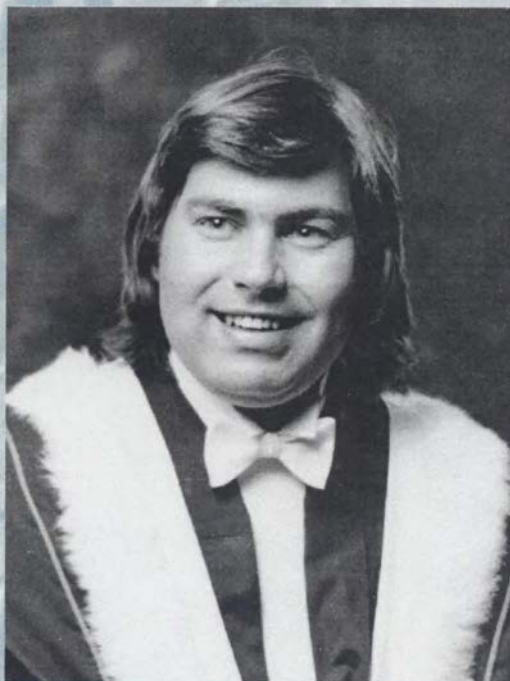

Donald Brigden Houston

Beneath that shy, unassuming exterior is one of the most gregarious likeable guys to have graced the halls of Robson Hall. We are sorry to bid farewell to him - the parties just won't be the same - there won't be someone claiming sobriety with his eyes closed. Second year Evidence students should watch the shelves for Houston, Sopinka and Lederman. Don became the Conflicts expert, through no design of his own, but merely because the Dean seemed to have a penchant for asking "Mr. Hoooston" obscure questions.

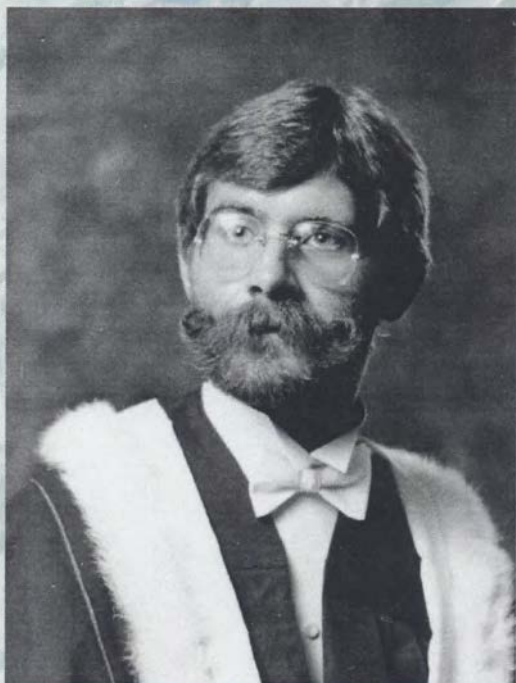

Eric Brock Irwin

And the Dean thought Eric wouldn't pass Conflicts - HA! Of course, no one else thought he would either. However, engagement agreed with Eric and he settled right into cramming. Occasionally seen in Tax class at night slightly inebriated, but nothing daunted Eric's class participation. Best of luck in Dauphin.

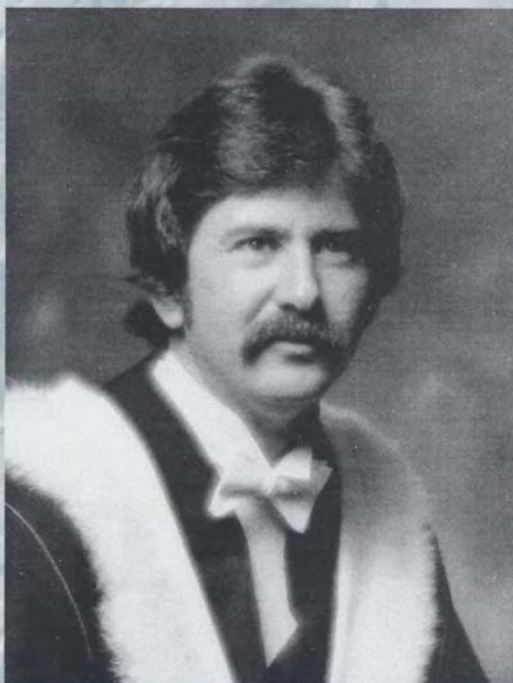

Victor Frank Janzen

Dancin' Janzen is now the proud father of a baby boy. The baby's moustache measured 8 inches when unwaxed at birth. Vic was often seen on the rads of U.C. drinking tar, and frequently could be found in C and CT in the back of the room, a gang helping to forget that Braid was still droning on.

Dunlop Harry Kells

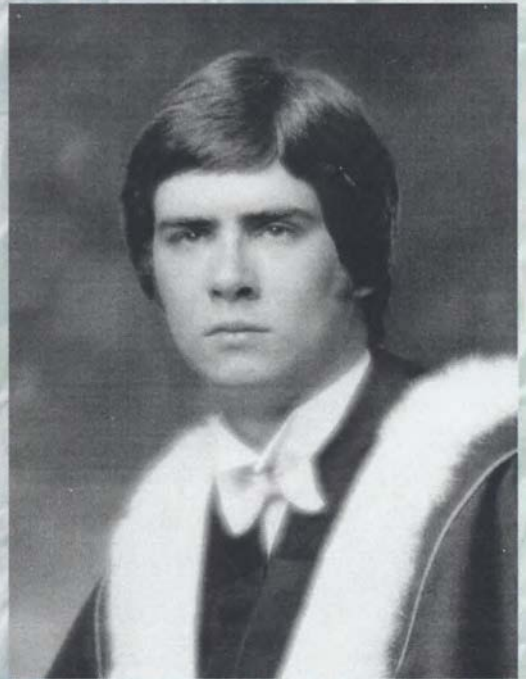

Denny quickly let us know what he preferred to be called, thereby sparing himself of any tire jokes. He was a co-producer of a successful Beer and Skits this year and was always willing to help out in all social events. Thompson Dorfman is where Denny will make his fortune.

Tracey Kernahan

Dubbed "Racey Tracey" by some of the low-life at school, Tracey was always a pleasure to be around (and some spent more time around her than others). Arpin and Company chose Tracey because of her outstanding stats. (We mean the prize in C and CT!).

Robin Michael Kersey

Our beloved treasurer, Robin kept good track of MLSA funds by keeping them in one of his shirts. One of the party boys at 404 River, Rob spent most of his time at school either feeling the affects of the night before, going to McDonald's for breakfast, lunch and dinner or making up with his girlfriend.

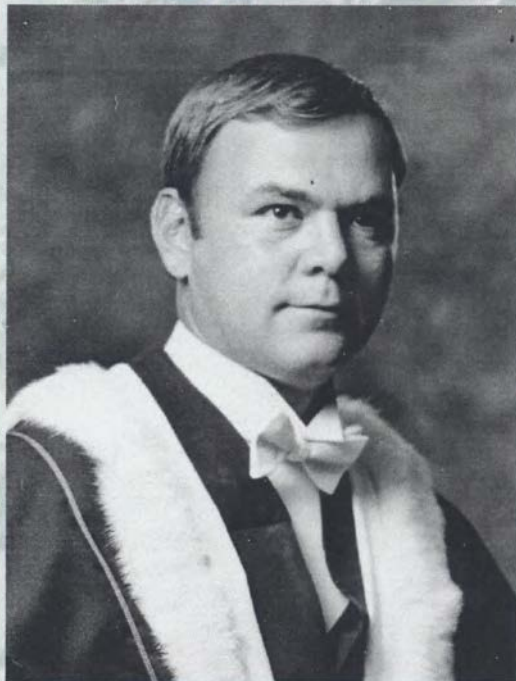

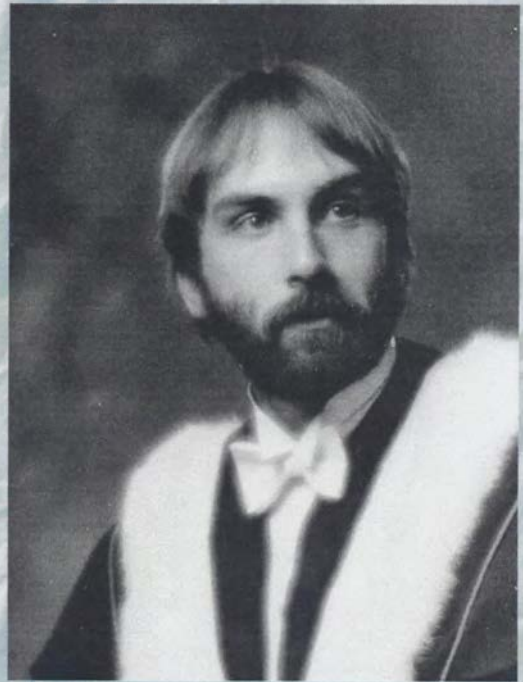

Surendra Singh Khanuja

Our resident Swami, we had to question Suren's sanity by moving to Winnipeg from India. The weather alone should have dissuaded him, let alone the looneys in this class. Suren is articling with Carbert et al and should add a lot of class to the operation.

Timothy James Patrick Killeen

"Klinger" Killeen usually has his head in the clouds - large forehead creates quite a glare when sunny. Known to wear earrings. Feet like a mallard, Tim leaves a distinctive multi-directional path in the snow. Best known for hairy, white wedding gown.

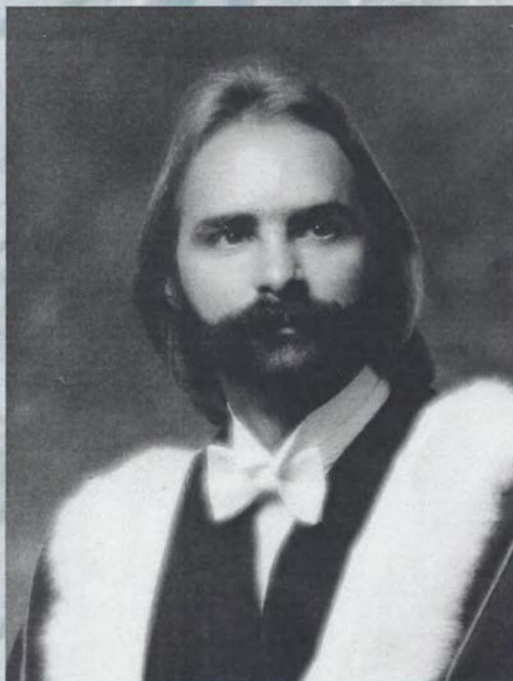

Donald Ray Knight

Class Clown, RCMP. undercover agent, athlete without talent, party boy without equal, articling in The Pas. For all of these reasons, Don was subjected to verbal abuse but he could always be heard to say, "that doesn't pith me off."

Marcia Lee Knight

A tough business woman and cool litigator, Marcie could handle any situation. While not anti-social, Marcie preferred to write her exams alone.

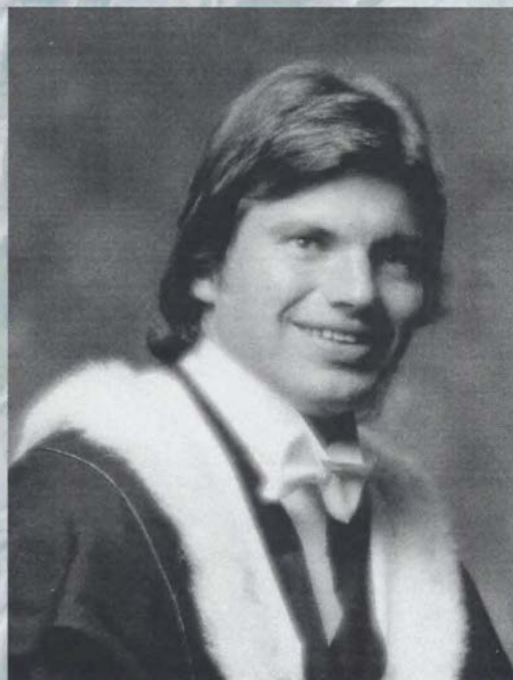

Thomas James Dean Kormylo

Winner of our annual Frank Zappa Look Alike contest, Tom caused a lot of stares in first year with his shoulder length hair and ponytails. A car lover, he was the proud owner of an old Chevy held together by masking tape. For articling interviews, Tom cut his hair and shaved. He also prepared a different story for each firm he talked to. He'll make a fine lawyer.

Donald Nicholas Kruk

His name should have made him a natural for criminal law, but his background is in commerce. (His name should draw in lots of clients, especially near income tax time). A good athlete in soccer and hockey, Fillmore Riley drafted Don to article and stop pucks for them (not necessarily in that order).

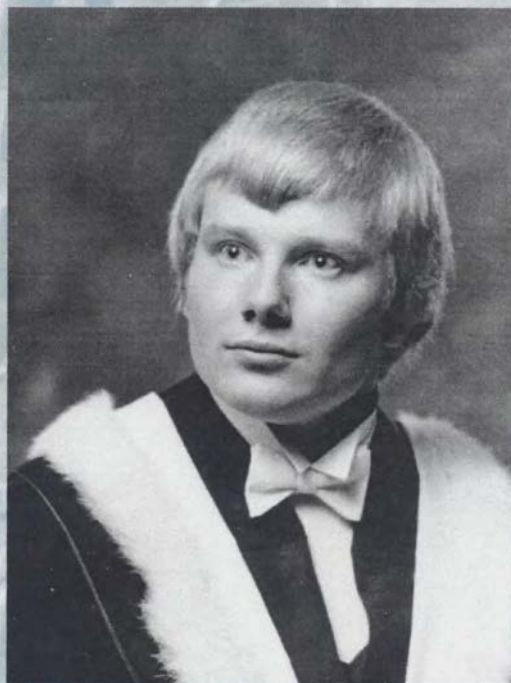

Dawn Arlene Lampe

With her quiet demeanor, Dawn stood out in the class as a diligent and attentive student. We're sure that the Dean et al saw her as a promising flower among unruly weeds. We wish Dawn the best of luck in the future.

Sheldon Wayne Lanchbery

Our sports rep in second year, Sheldon was responsible for the train trip to Edmonton. This means that he was also responsible for the tour of downtown Ste. Lazare and the marathon songfest. (It seems he only knows the tune to one song.) Now our man in Deloraine, Sheldon will definitely be an asset to Clement, Potter.

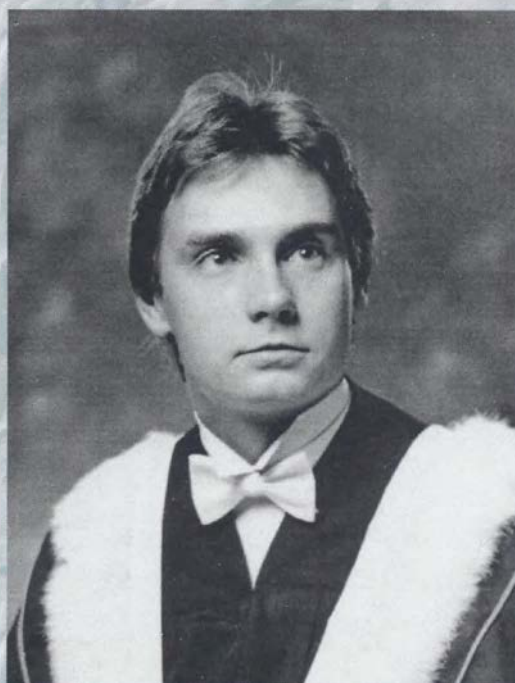

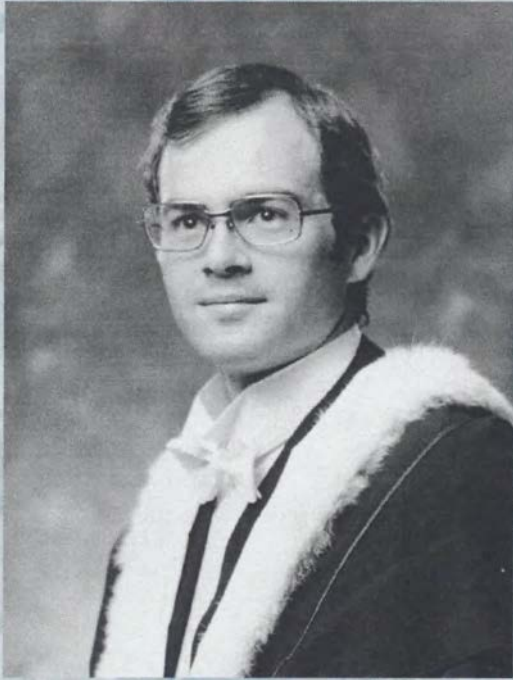

Frank Lavitt

Talking to Frank is like reading the Tax Act. There are a lot of words there, but you don't know what they mean. Despite this, Frank never let anyone get him down. His friendly face can now be seen in a tax book, in a small back room at Thompson Dorfman. Arguably, he's the richest guy (before tax) in our class. Just ask him.

Wayne Richard Leach

Never combs his hair but always wears trendy jeans and pajama tops to accentuate his cute body. He's a strong proponent of palm tree justice. When not sleeping, Wayne runs Leach Escort Services. Part sloth, he's often seen on Fridays holding down the desk with his forehead. Dances by himself when drunk, and drinks by himself when dancing. A known chef - cooks ham like a turkey.

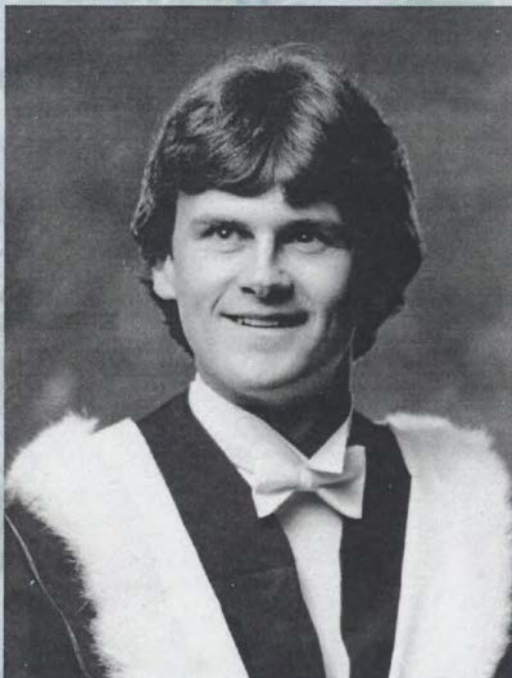

Harris Henry Leck

Harris was always willing to put his points forward on any topic. His ability to argue got him into the Greenbergs in second year. The fact that he didn't smoke or drink made him unique in our class, but he always seemed to be becoming a father during April exams. Say no more! Good luck in the future.

Mona Kayla Lee

No one has ever had to put up with the things Mona has, and still managed to keep their sense of humor. Our rep in third year and in charge of Grad, Mona was always willing to give her time for others. If you want to thank her now, it's not too late, just call 489-8307 and ask for Mona, Mona, Mona.

Eric George Lister

Notwithstanding his inability to dance, Eric soft-shoed his way into public office. Robson Hall's oracle, whose ability to predict final grades was a mystery to all. Eric will be remembered for: (a) organizing the Snow Bowl; (b) champion croke player; (c) John Cleese's alter ego.

Paul Lungen

Not to be confused with his rowdy, punk clone, Major Pip, Paul spent most of the time studying diligently. Used to dance at the Swinging Gate, but doesn't like to talk about it. Always looking for 3:00 a.m. nightspots.

John Francis McGee

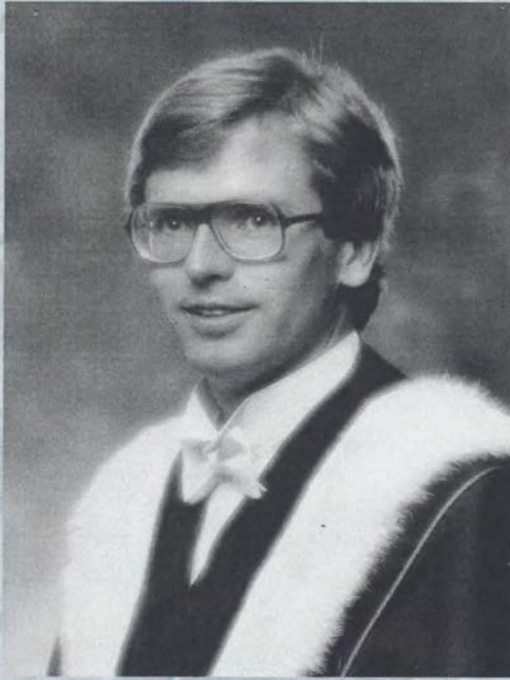

Serious doubts about John's legal career arose after Christmas in first year. He dispelled those doubts, however, and even got into the Greenbergs in second year, with hardly any effort on his part. John decided that he has had enough of Manitoba winters and has moved to Alaska. Need we say more?

Bonnie-Kae McPhee

A woman of steel, Bonnie shared an office at D'Arcy Deacon and lived to tell about it. A combined Home Ec. and LLB. grad, Bonnie is specializing in ptomaine torts.

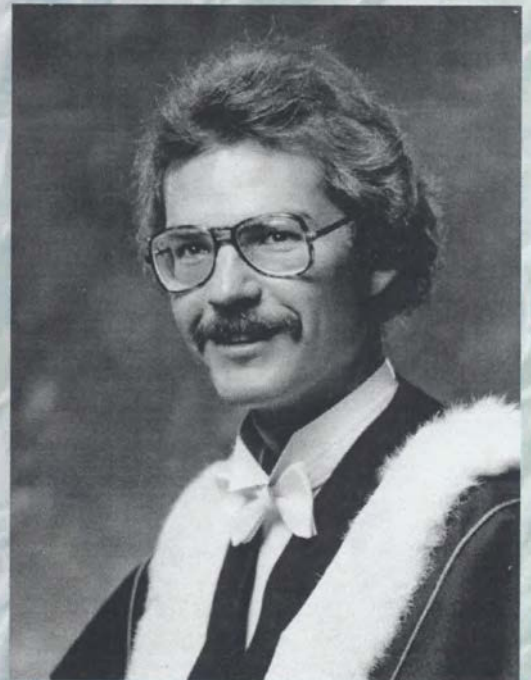

Trevor Lorne Maguire

Called "Trover" ever since the Dean's lecture on History of Law, he was probably the most easygoing of the whole class. Now articling in Boissevain, Trevor's main concern is trying to get a "fuzz buster" to beat the radar when he races in for Bar Ad. A former engineer, we are sure Trover has made the right career move.

William Martin Meronek

Another engineer who couldn't get a job, he came to law where he couldn't get a job except in Calgary. Chairman of the Social Committee, Marty not only threw great socials but made money at them too. One of the highlights of law school occurred when Marty arrived late for the first Trust lecture, after Debicka had taken the roll. She said to him, "You must be moronic," and we all agreed.

Esther Lianne Miller

Unbeknownst to many, it was Lianne who beat Zonk Harris for the perfect tan at the George Hamilton Tanning Open. Our resident tax expert, Lianne taught Jack London everything he knows. Lianne has since moved on to the tax free pastures of Alberta.

Lorraine Frances Minish

Bright, attractive and a great personality, Lorraine played hockey, football and made the Dean's Honour List this year. She was a great asset to our class and since she has chosen to article in Yellowknife (who knows why?), we will miss her. Best of luck.

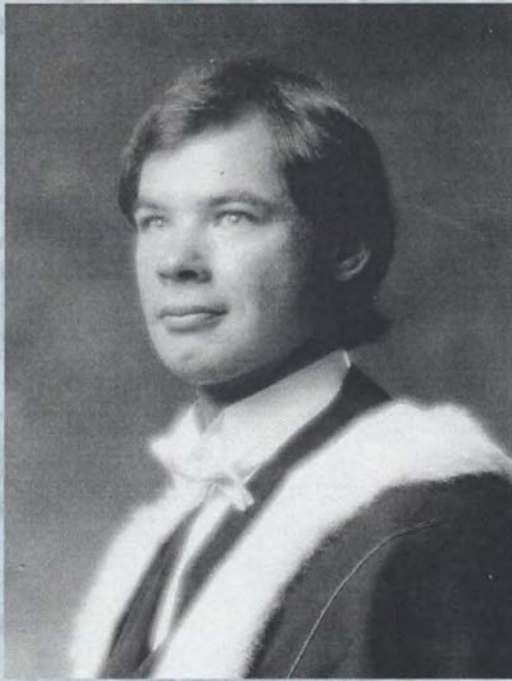

Claire Iris Moglove

Claire worked her way through law school working at a bar. Although this won't help her prepare for the Bar in Ontario, she will have the upper hand in ordering drinks at the bar after call to the bar.

Sherryl Faith Nathanson

Sherryl tried marriage for two years before she changed her name. With two lawyers in the family, we hope neither gets a toothache. Sherryl managed to squeeze law school in between Hawaii and Mazatlan. A real gourmet, when Craig Clayborne retires, the New York Times is sure to get Sherryl to do their reviews.

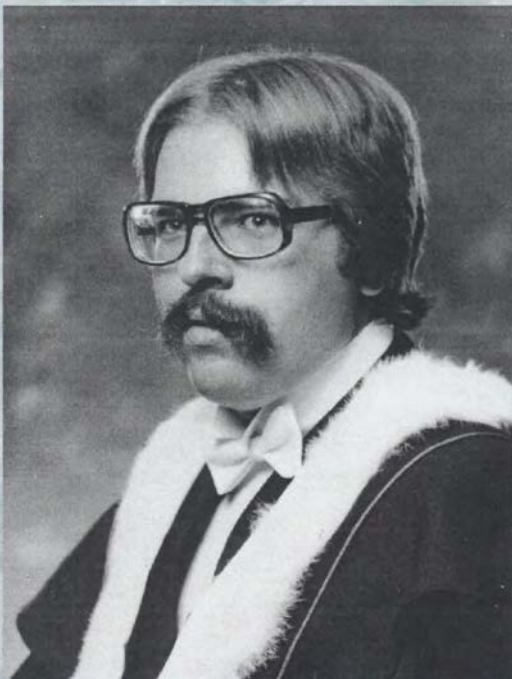

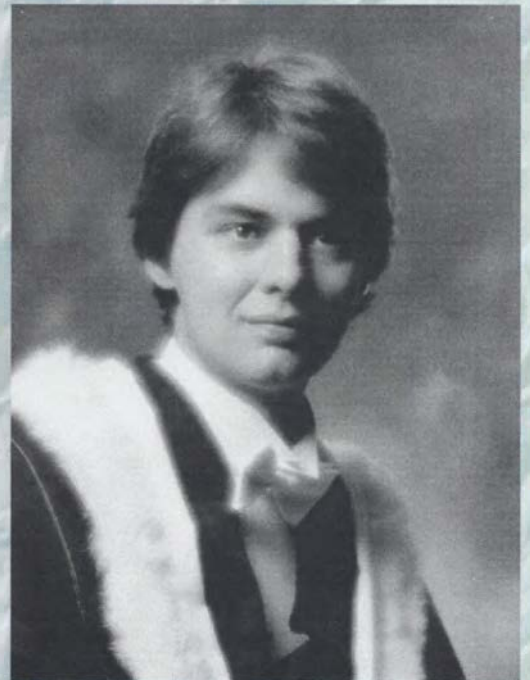

James Murray Pasieka

Better known as PASEEK, can be found frolicking at the Courts - usually B-Ball or Tenees (urban for tennis). Prior to marriage he was a renowned Fox-chaser - likes to run them down on horseback. Solomon G. finalist - consolation division champ - picked up in the draft by Taxaco (Ukrainian for "Texaco") and washed up in the draught at the Grant after Friday afternoon hockey.

Myroslaw Pawlowsky

At first we thought that Myron would be too polite and too nice to be a good lawyer, however, he chose to article at Norton, Schwartz where we know he will get the proper training to overcome that. All seriousness aside, we wish Myron the best.

Alex Petrenko

Not your average gold medallist. Alex taught Wills with Cam Harvey. An immaculate dresser, his white tuxedo could be spotted at the symphony and ringside. While others worked, Alex gambled his way through law school. Hated typewriters. Handwrote all his papers in one draft off the top of his head.

Mary Christine Pic

Mary was a hardworking student, who took good notes and was always in a good mood. We all owe her our thanks for taking the Honourable Member for Gilbert Plains as a litigation partner. Given the circumstances, she may have saved his life. (Someone else might have killed him.) Mary is articling with Baker, Zivot and we wish her a bright future.

Sandra Lee Polinsky

Robson Hall's Total Woman - imagine her in cellophane. Sandra's library whisper could be heard in the common room. An intellectual and a feminist, Sandra believes that a movie without subtitles isn't worth seeing.

Ellen Pollock

A fixture on the rads, was finally granted an easement. Contrary to popular belief, Ellen did know where the library was - she even went up there once to find a fourth for bridge.

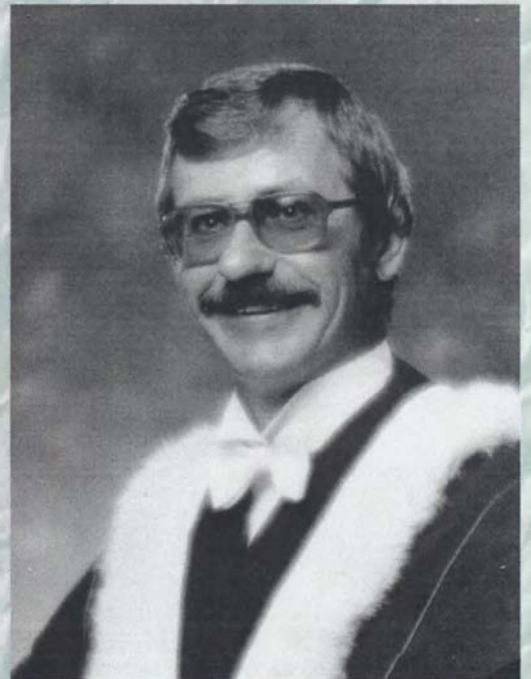

Gail Frances Poole

A model of diplomacy and tact, Gail was seldom heard except on a point of order. Gail's training as a speech therapist enabled her to pinpoint Dave Deutscher's problem right away. Gail was one of the most athletic people in our class - she could often be found on the squashcourts. Retired to Victoria, B.C.

Stewart Ross Poole

The other half of the dynamic duo of Croke is always the one to start the ball rolling. A senior, surrounded by freshmen and sophomores, we once heard him remark: "I feel like a 20 year old, but there's never one around."

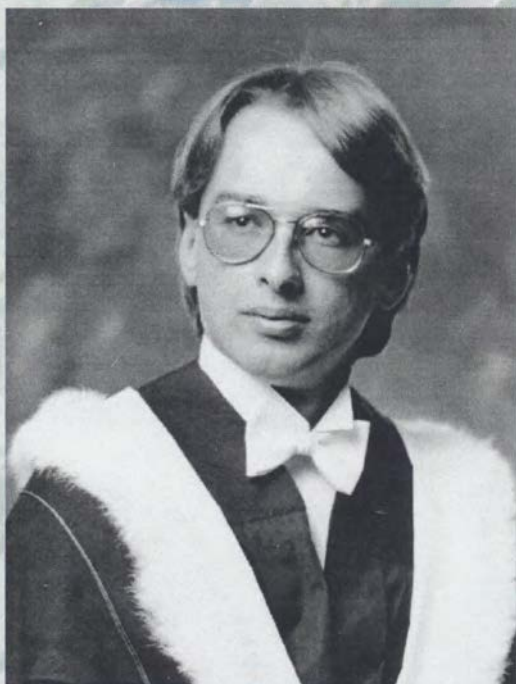

Thomas Alfred Poole

Backrow Tom also known as "Limpid Poole" spent much of his time reading those noted redneck journals: "Women, Liquor and Fast Cars" and "Gun, Fun and Modern Trouble." Found his niche in Cowntown. Bleeding heart liberals and pooftahs beware!

Joel Manley Remis

Our August leader has somehow been able to successfully combine an eagerness to lead with a need to be pushed. Yearbook editor and winner of the Procrastination of the Year Award, Joel was supposed to write this write up. He put it off so long that we had to BUMS around with Mona.

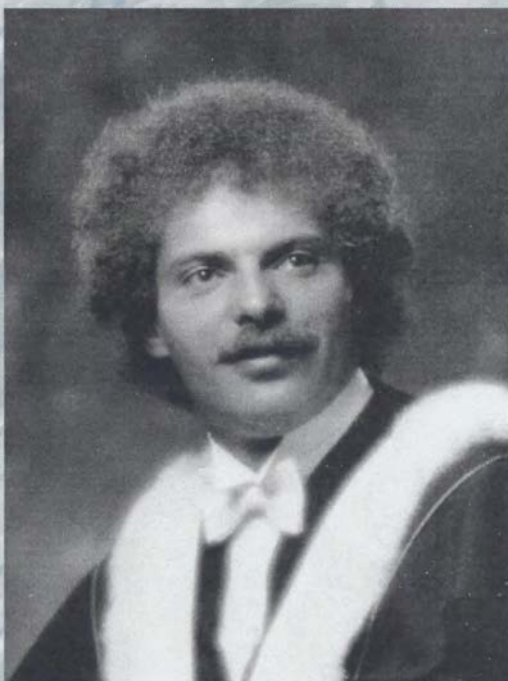

Rodrique Charles Roy

Rod is the strong silent type. Numerous people were asked to do this write up but they said they had never heard of him. Actually, Rod is hardworking and thorough and prefers others to do the talking. Naturally he is articling with McCaffrey & Company where his anonymity is secure.

Ray Charles Rutman

When Ray entered law school, his hair was perfectly straight and his ideas were pretty kinky. Now, after three years of law school, his hair is pretty kinky and his ideas, well ... they are still the same! He is a hard worker and a nice guy!

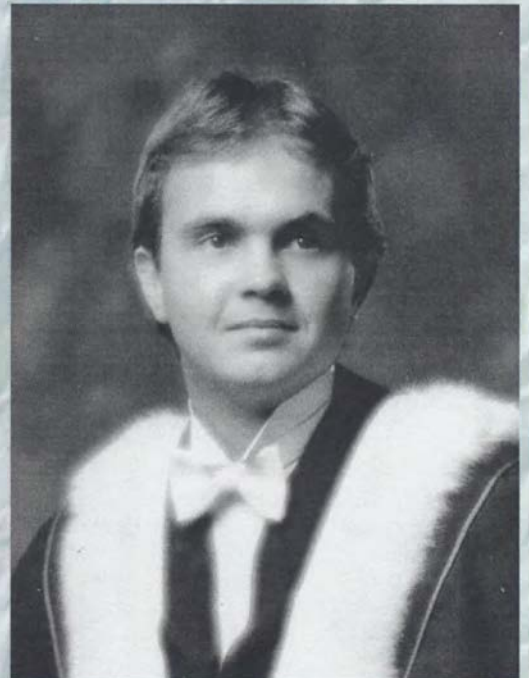

Shalom Dov Ber Schachter

Our labour advocate's steel trap mind endeared him to all. It's said that he went to Toronto to article because he heard that the chairs in the Bar Ad classroom in Winnipeg didn't swivel.

Robert Alan Scramstad

He's a Selkirk boy with a mind to match. His political ambitions suggest that he'll go far (perhaps before the Ethics Committee). His charming smile and baby-faced good looks belie strong convictions and a willingness to go for the jugular in the heat of debate.

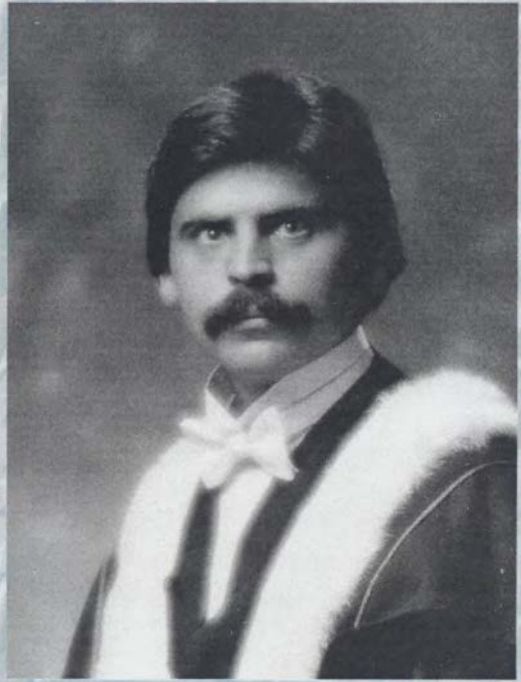

Lindsay Shaddy

A closet socialist, Lindsay managed the occasional law school appearance when not campaigning. Well educated, Lindsay obtained a B.A. from Cambridge. What more can you say about a person who wears plaid skirts, Hugh McDonald Tee Shirts and carries a bowling shoe bag.

David Michael Shrom

David was a quiet and unassuming person throughout law school, known primarily for having the fastest handwriting west of Osgoode. During his articling year Dave traded his pen at Robson Hall for a beer mug at Gallagher.

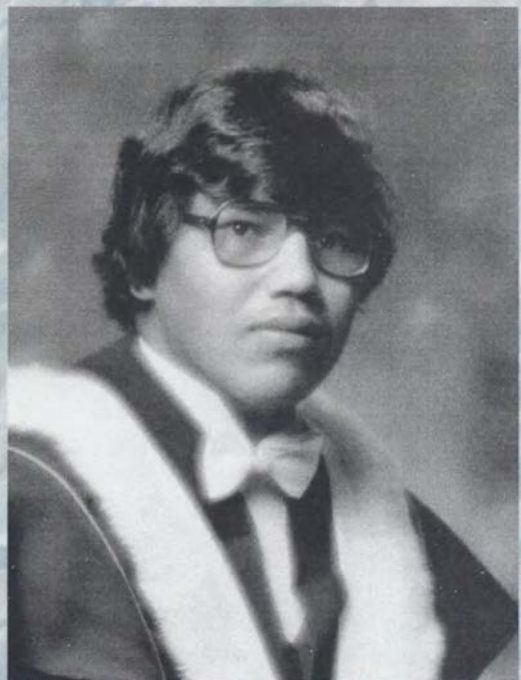

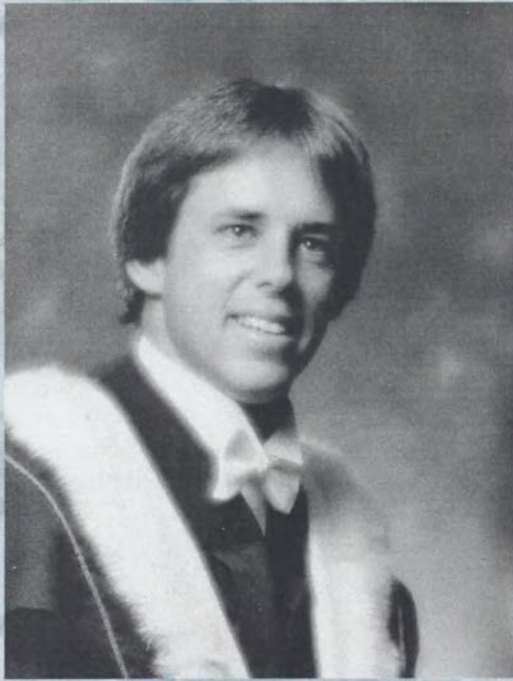

Brenda Laye Silver

A master of disguise, only her hairdresser knows for sure. If Brenda could sing, she'd be Barbara Streisand. As it is, she can only do J.D. in "Leather and Lace."

Calvin Murray Sinclair

A native of Selkirk, Murray attended Law School on a day pass. He even married his psych nurse. Murray was never seen without his trusty thermos. Could that be the source of his good spirits? His booming voice and analytic mind elevated him from the back row of the classroom to centre stage in the Solomon Greenbergs. Murray always weighed heavily as a participant in classroom discussions.

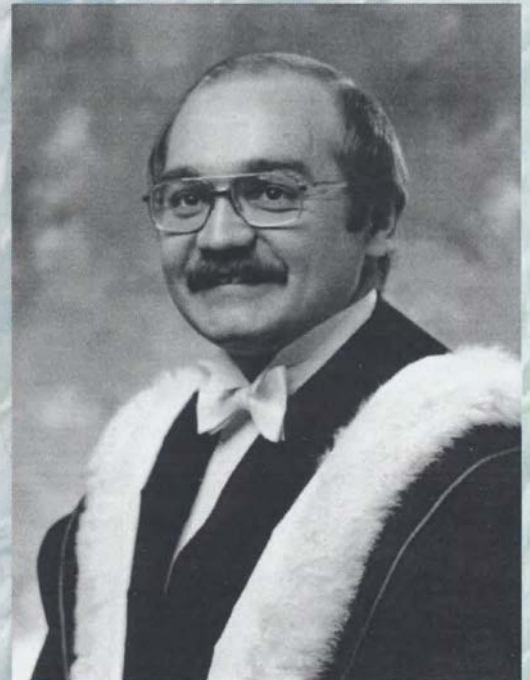

William Edward James Skelly

Buy-Sell has an insatiable appetite for skiing, sailing and partying. He's been known to miss the odd class, the scent of Grand Marnier usually indicates his presence. A classy guy, Bill's shorts are regularly dry cleaned at a well known establishment (hold the starch), especially after exams. Purporting to be a hockey player, he performs better after games at the St. James. Runs a post-party chauffeur service for Partners of P & H (watch out for parked cars).

Nicholas Valodymir Slonosky.

Nick packs 10 minutes of speech into a 30 second conversation. A reserved guy, he has become a real operator. He has been heard to say out loud, "I think you should get to know and love someone before you use and degrade them."

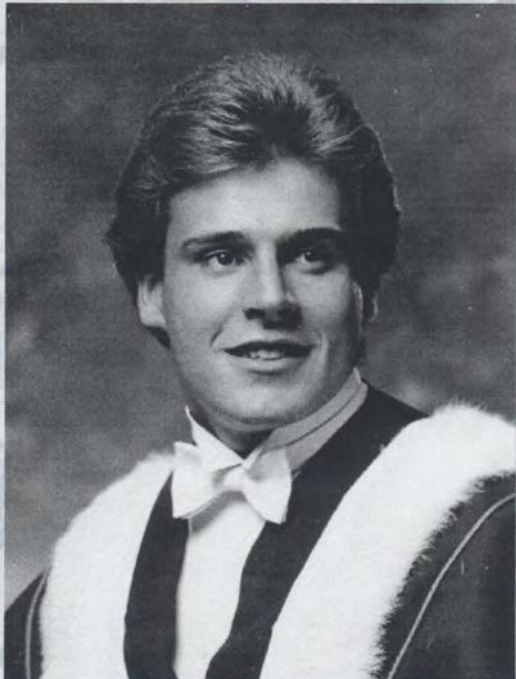

Samuel Slutsky

Sam's just a Prince of a guy. He was one of the most respected people in the class. Sam had that "je ne sais quoi" that appealed to all. His intelligent comments and subtle wit were always appreciated in any setting. If you believe this, you'll believe anything.

Randal Thomas Smith

The Junior half of the Dynamic Duo of Croke, Randy is making plans to publish a comprehensive code to his handwriting so that all of us who borrowed his notes can find out what the heck they say. Despite his many friends and his charming personality, Randy still got stuck with this write-up.

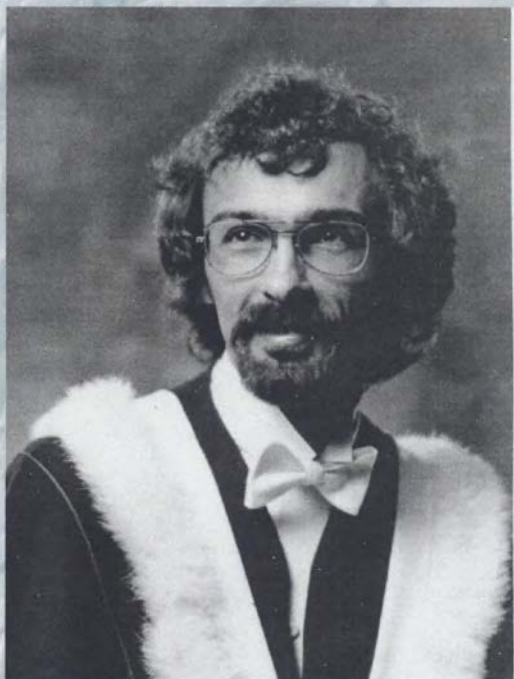

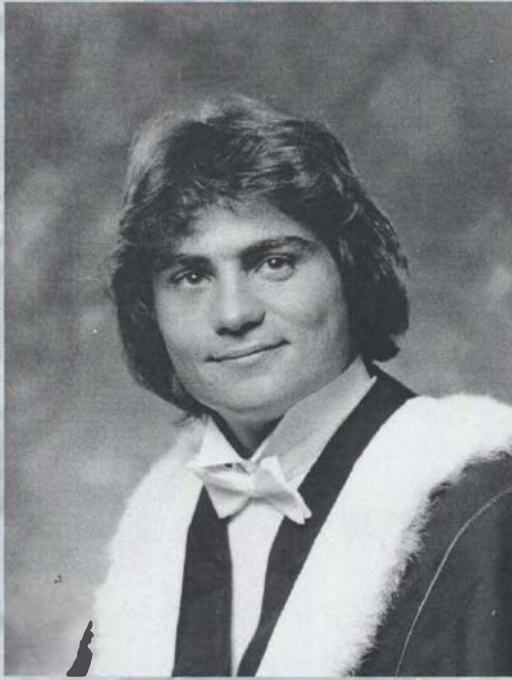

Robert Phillip Sokalski

Res ipsa loquitur! What else can you say about a guy who kissed the Chancellor at convocation? It epitomized his law school career and made us all proud to have known him. The Dean, on the other hand, is still recovering. Sok is going to ply his trade at Pitblado & Hoskin. The old boys are still spinning in their graves.

Robert Douglas Joseph Steinburg

Doug Steinburg (a platonic Aristotelian) is a person who has traveled through school believing that his mind is a tabular rasa - searching in vain for a piece of chalk. He believes that for every answer there are two questions ... Doug takes moronic pleasure in pun-ishing people with pathetic plays on words. His defence: I nanity. NOTE: That's inanity and not insanity.

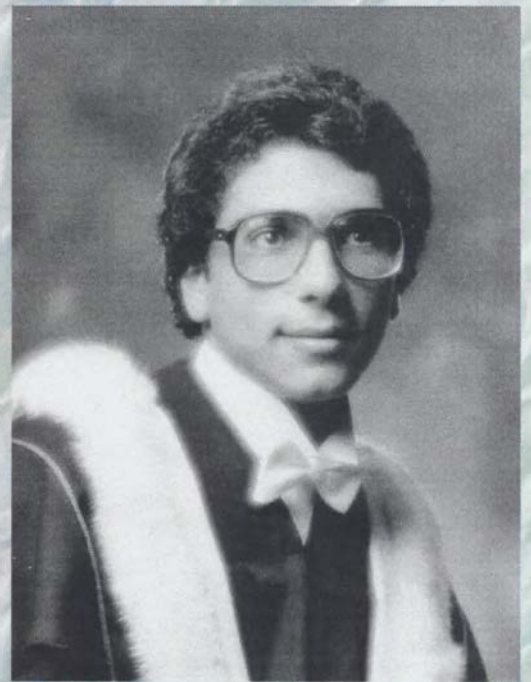

Marvin Neil Stern

A miniature Butch Nepon, Marv preferred a drink for his constitution. In a few years Marv might be able to reach the bar. Pip's former partner in crime, he's now become a man of conviction.

Ian Mark Stillman

A rather muted fellow, no one ever doubted that Mark would eventually get married. They just wondered how he would say, "I do." Mark has become another of the oil barons in Alberta.

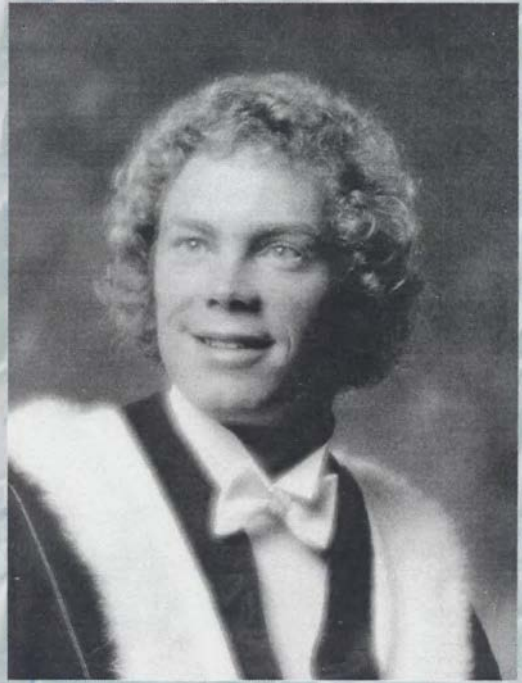

Patricia Colleen Suche

A woman at Robson Hall, you say?
Who became a lawyer one day.
Knew her torts.
A success in courts.
It's now Fillmore, Riley, Suche

Gabriel Bruce Taylor

Bruce was the typical marginal student, a mediocre athlete and a trifle bit homely. Seriously, a very bright person, Bruce spent many of his evenings tutoring junior high students.

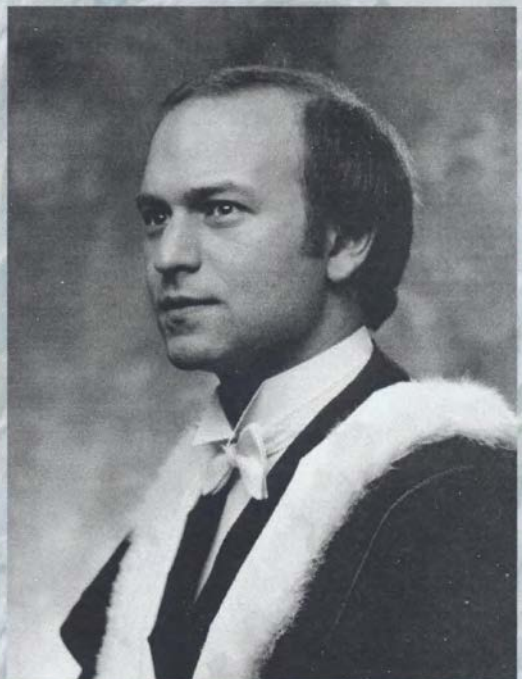

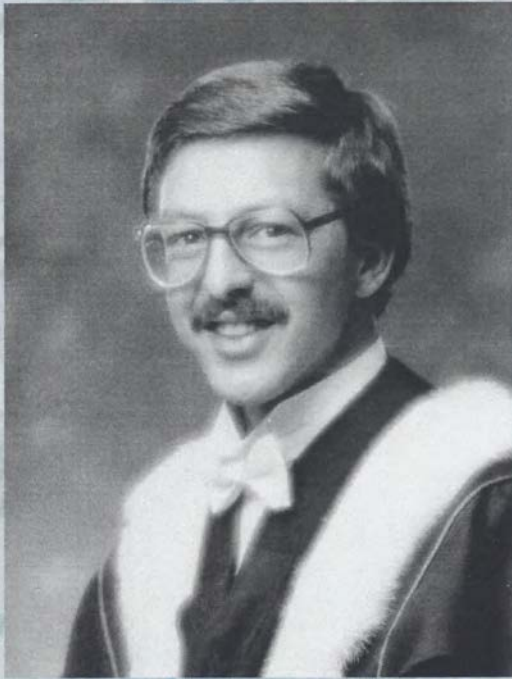

Howard Lorne Tennenhouse

We asked someone to write about Howie and we never heard from him again. We are not sure what to think of that. Certainly Howie's pleasant disposition and perverse smile will serve him well at Norm Gould's office.

Sheldon Zane Tessler

Would someone please slow this man down! Did the Bass and an encore too (even fooled Doris). Where did he get all those leisure suits? Great raconteur and was part of the T & T comedic tag team.

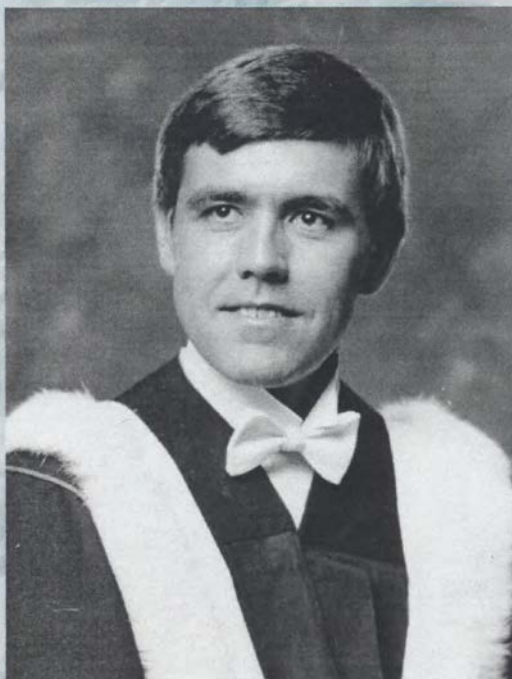

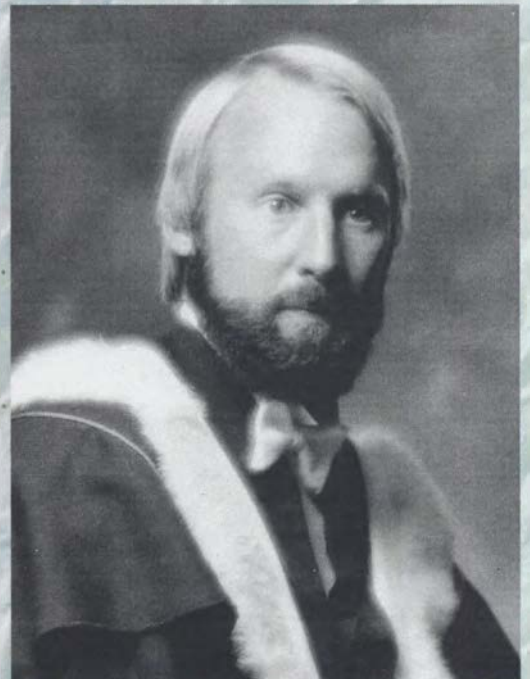

Murray Trachtenberg

Murray was so conscientious he even took notes when Szack spoke. One of the brown bag boys, "Tractor's" idea of dessert was 3 games of pinball.

Lee Semmens Trott

We showed our good sense in electing Lee as our Bencher so that the profession at large would discount the rumours that we were all immature and rowdy. A Greenberg finalist, Lee was always friendly and willing to assist anyone who asked.

Boris William Tyzuk

Boris came to fill the void left by Kay and Schwartz. It only took one year back in Winnipeg for Boris to realize B.C. winters were better. Ah Boris, we hardly knew ye! (Didn't you write the Bass?)

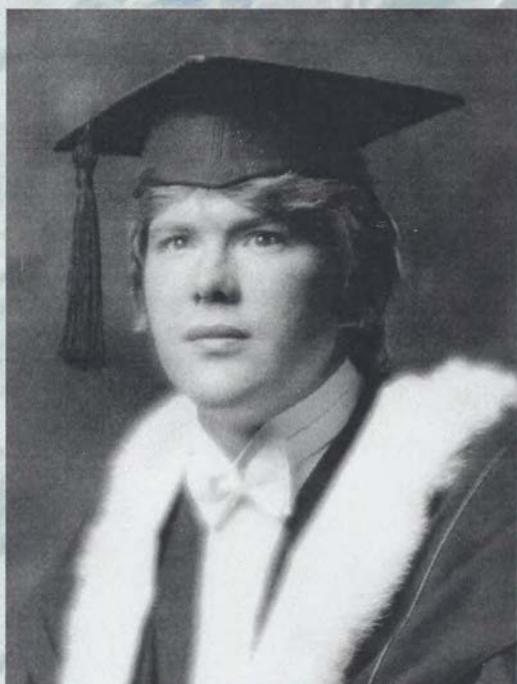

Marilyn Walder Billinkoff

Loves Janet Leigh sweaters, is now learning to Pogo. Collects last names. TRIVIA: Who was the class's first T.V. personality? (Hint: the first one with the ring in Walder Werier tag team).

Michael Mark Wasylin

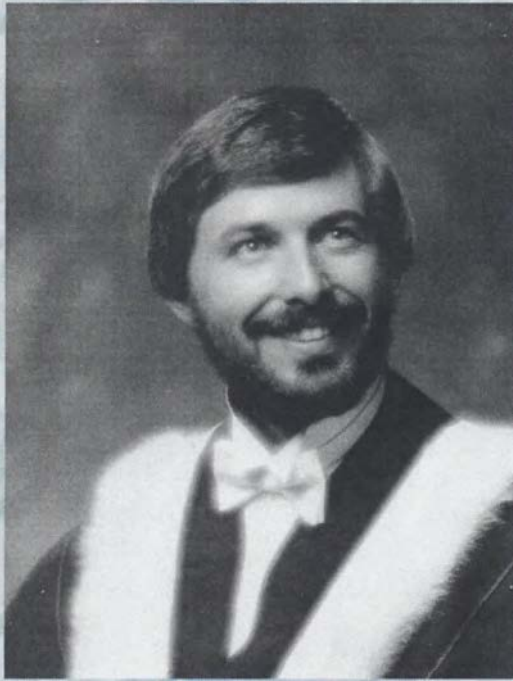

Mike's 2B's answer to Henning. He's car pooling with Hawranik to article in Beausejour. His prowess in basketball is legendary. Word has it that he must wear a licence plate at all times so victims of his fast "break" can identify him.

Shelley Michele Weiss

Nice, but borders on hysteria. (See (1961) 34 W.W.R. at 340 top). Following the path of Mona Brown to Richardson and we wish her good luck.

Gregory Lewis Oliver Wells

'Oil' Wells, or Tex as he was sometimes called, thought his articling position in Winnipeg was the "Pits" so he played out his option and signed on to practise boat law out west. We are sure he will be successful in whatever career he chooses. You betcha! But we can't hold that against him.

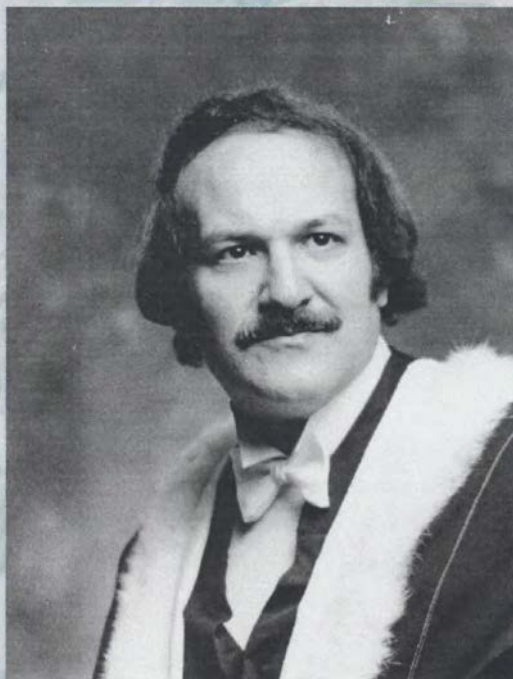

Jodie Fern Werier

Leather pants and boots are her trademark. Loves dogs, torts, luncheon meat and fast cars - but often gets them confused. She's smart as a whip, and twice as good looking! Is for some things and against others. Jody is close friends with Marilyn, and this gives her good exposure to the Punk scene. Hardly ever snores. Drinks LITE beer.

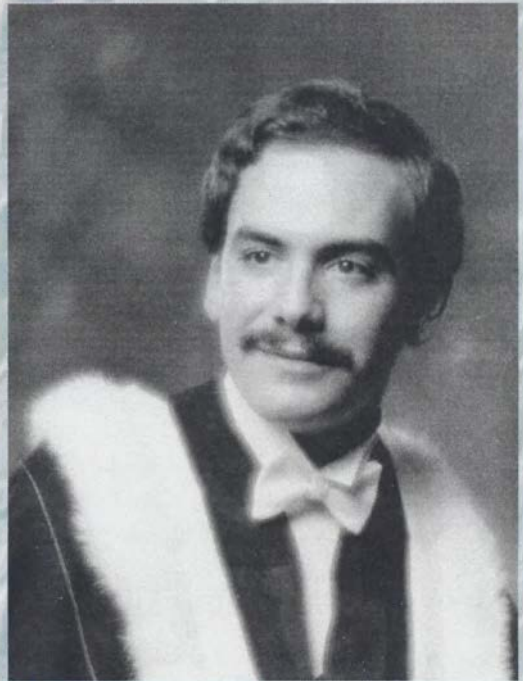

Jerrold David Williams

You've heard of Ermano Barone? Well, meet his Official Agent. Jerry is our master of the one liner and resident Pinball Wizard. An ex-American who's really almost like one of us. He'd like to think that we miss him since he has gone to Cabbagetown to practise, but we haven't the heart to tell him the truth.

Richard Lorne Yaffe

Richard was known as the strong silent type, especially during litigation. What Hansard is to the House of Commons, "Discards Notes" are to Robson Hall.

Daria Zyla

Used to call herself A & AABCO, but got too many phone calls. The original career woman, Daria has made a career out of finding a career. The ultimate procrastinator, if she was yearbook editor, the pictures still would not be taken.

Brenda Louise Armstrong

After having spent the Christmas of second year in Cuba, Brenda decided to take international law so that she could relate that experience to the real world. However, after International there was doubt that a real world existed. Brenda always appeared to be the calm in the middle of the storm.

Joel Richard Braemar

Joel "The Phantom" was rarely seen in classes in third year, but nonetheless, worked very hard. To calm down, he had a part-time job for Friday and Saturday nights. Joel also has the best collection of bad jokes going (or the worst collection of good jokes). Rumour also has it that Joel has mastered the art of typing a tie!

Lisa Karen Fainstein

In first year, Lisa, to the delight of the entire class, suggested to the Dean (as he then was) that it was conceivable that law students, too, had need of a social life. The Dean, much to the delight of the class, went into convulsions and ranted and raved about some intestinal difficulty he was having. We shall be forever grateful to Lisa for giving us the opportunity to hear such a memorable speech. Lisa is however memorable as well for her sense of humour and perpetual vivaciousness.

Rosina De Francesco

Rose was the definite winner of "The Best Tan After Christmas, Much to the Dean's Chagrin" contest. However, the great Jamaican sun must have been noticed by the Dean. He gave Rose great billing in his farewell speech. Rose was also an active volleyball player.

Arnold Howard Hochman

Arnie has gone to Toronto to redraft the Securities Act for Ontario. Or, he may rewrite the Tax Act. Who knows, he may yet be back in Winnipeg to relieve third year students from having Klein in Business Planning. But meanwhile, he is just another Bay Street Boy.

Jeffrey Jay Kay

Like others (see McGee, John) Jeff could not stand any more Manitoba winters and took his last year in San Diego or thereabouts. He says it was for the intellectual and cultural exchange, but we know it was so he could keep his tan. Besides, the Dean was glad to get rid of him.

Ronald Gordon Klassen

The "balaclava cyclist," Ron was known throughout the campus as the guy who cycled all year round. Ron excelled at arguing law while shelling sunflower seeds at the speed of sound. LegalAid could only improve with Ron in its employ.

Grant Kenneth Mazowita

An accomplished curler (aggregate winner in second year) and an excellent student (Dean's Honour List this year), Grant was the only member of our class to suffer from malaria in January. We feel that Grant is one of the few saner members of our class, he decided to continue at McGill rather than article.

Ronald Joseph Menec

One of the quieter and nicer members of the class, Ron gave up a teaching career for law. He probably has regretted it ever since. Articling with Barry Kerr, we wish Ron all the best in the future.

John David Peden

Trombone John. As a member of the Beer and Skits ensemble, John showed his true colours Labatt's Blue. Not even the fact that he is an aspiring Crown Prosecutor could change our opinion that John is a really nice guy.

Sheila Doris Rogers

Our women's rights advocate who dropped her married name and kept her husband. She can recognize a patronizing remark better and faster than you could hope to cover it up. Sheila is actively involved in Women in Law and her firm convictions will carry her far as a lawyer.

Fred Harinder Sandhu

Fred's presence on the football field was one reason that the Law team dominated. His strong Ukrainian background has drawn him to Dauphin where he will article for LegalAid.

Richard Allan Schwartz

Another deserter! He left after two years (those winters again) and finished up in Lotusland. His drumming ability was sorely missed at Beer & Skits especially since Slutsky was his replacement.

Marc Wilfred Shannon

Cynical to the end, Marc jumped at the chance to work for the CPR and to reopen CPR v. Turta. "I've never seen a curtain at the Land Titles Office," he is reported to have said. Besides, as a fringe benefit Marc is allowed to wear an engineer's hat while riding his tricycle in the empty station. Politically, Marc can be described as a small liberal.

Robert Gunnar Siddall

Buchwald-Sid's one of the back row boys who loves beer, butter and nurses exchanges and hates law, tax and combing his hair. Was a well known fixture in the library. The last hint of Rob's law school appearance vanished when he traded in his flannel shirts and work boots for a white shirt and tie.

Ronald Cyril Stein

After the P.Q. victory in Quebec, Ronnie sought political asylum in the West. When Ronnie heard that Cliff Edwards was our Dean, he knew Winnipeg was the place. The excitement of Winnipeg's night life combined with Keith Turner's 8:30s forced Ronnie to return to the barren East.

Isaac Thau

Isaac received invitations to Chinese New Year Parties. When not mud wrestling or playing the banjo, Isaac can be found assisting the downtrodden masses on Vancouver Island. Rumoured to be Bruno Gerussi's understudy.

John Michael Waldron

Practises penmanship by rewriting his notes. Our class capitalist worked in a bank and ran his own plant business. A quiet guy who sought the quiet lifestyle of rural Manitoba, excels in Wills and Estates.

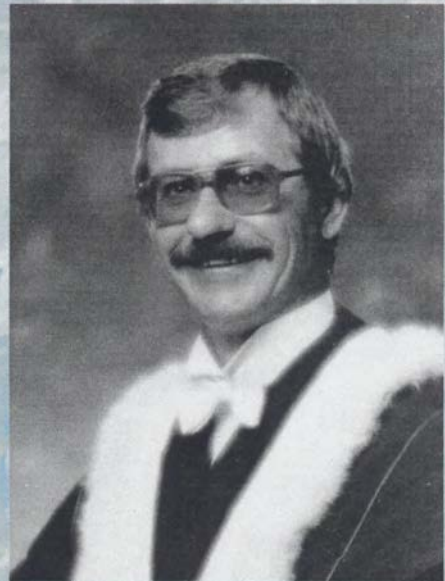

Brian Frederick Woyiwada

He's Robson Hall's resident musical genius. Rick had his scholarship revoked when "Hit the Road Cliff" went platinum. Former host of Robson Hall Tonight, he now runs Rick's Place at 373 Broadway. All are summoned to make an appearance.
