Dean's Message

It is hard to credit that it is now three years since we welcomed to Robson Hall you who now graduate as the Class of 1987. They have been full and active years and we hope that they have given you the base of knowledge and skills for the lifetime of continuing self-education and personal development that, together with the sense of service well and truly rendered, are among the profound satisfactions to be employed by those who commit themselves to a learned profession.

I hope also that amidst the many varied demands of your future occupations, you will be able to preserve the camaraderie, the concern and support for each other, and the lively good humour of your law school years.

Graduating at a time of marked challenge to the law and the legal system to respond to changing conditions and needs, you face, whatever the lines along which your careers may develop, special responsibilities and opportunities. The way you meet them really matters, not to you yourselves alone, but to the entire community.

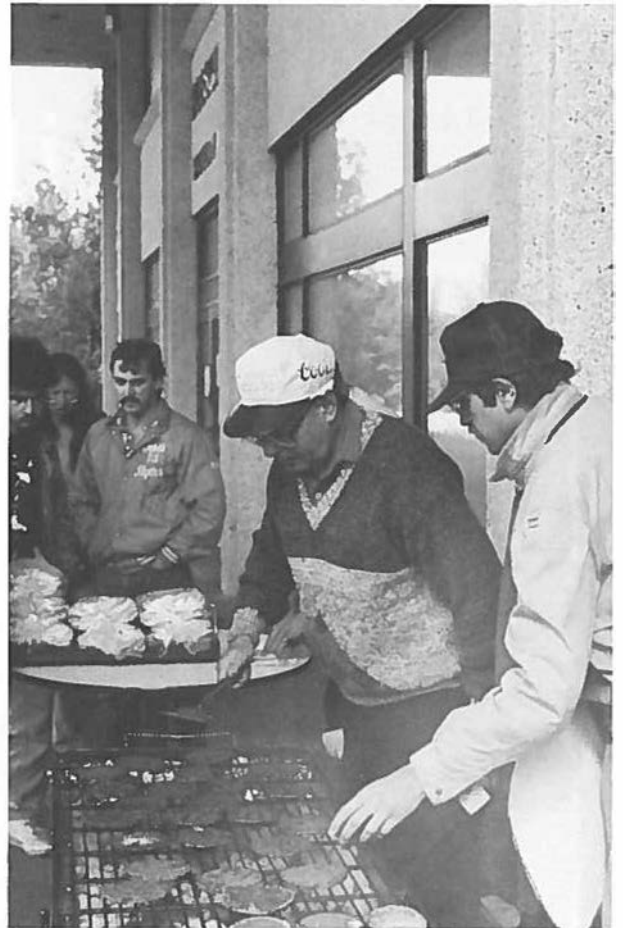

I suspect that among the questions you will have to address, will be some concerning the nature, values, and obligations of your profession. In doing so, one may suggest, you will find both guidance and encouragement in the standards and ideals of our late colleague, Professor Keith Turner Q.C. He was, as Chief Justice Dickson wrote to me, a teacher to us all, whether law students, lawyers, or judges.

We shall miss you here at Robson Hall. However, it is one of the special consolations in the life of those who teach in a law school that those whom we lose as students we soon regain as professional colleagues and supportive alumni. We look forward to that continuing association, with the special confidence born of the intent you have already shown to continue to support actively and generously the work of your School.

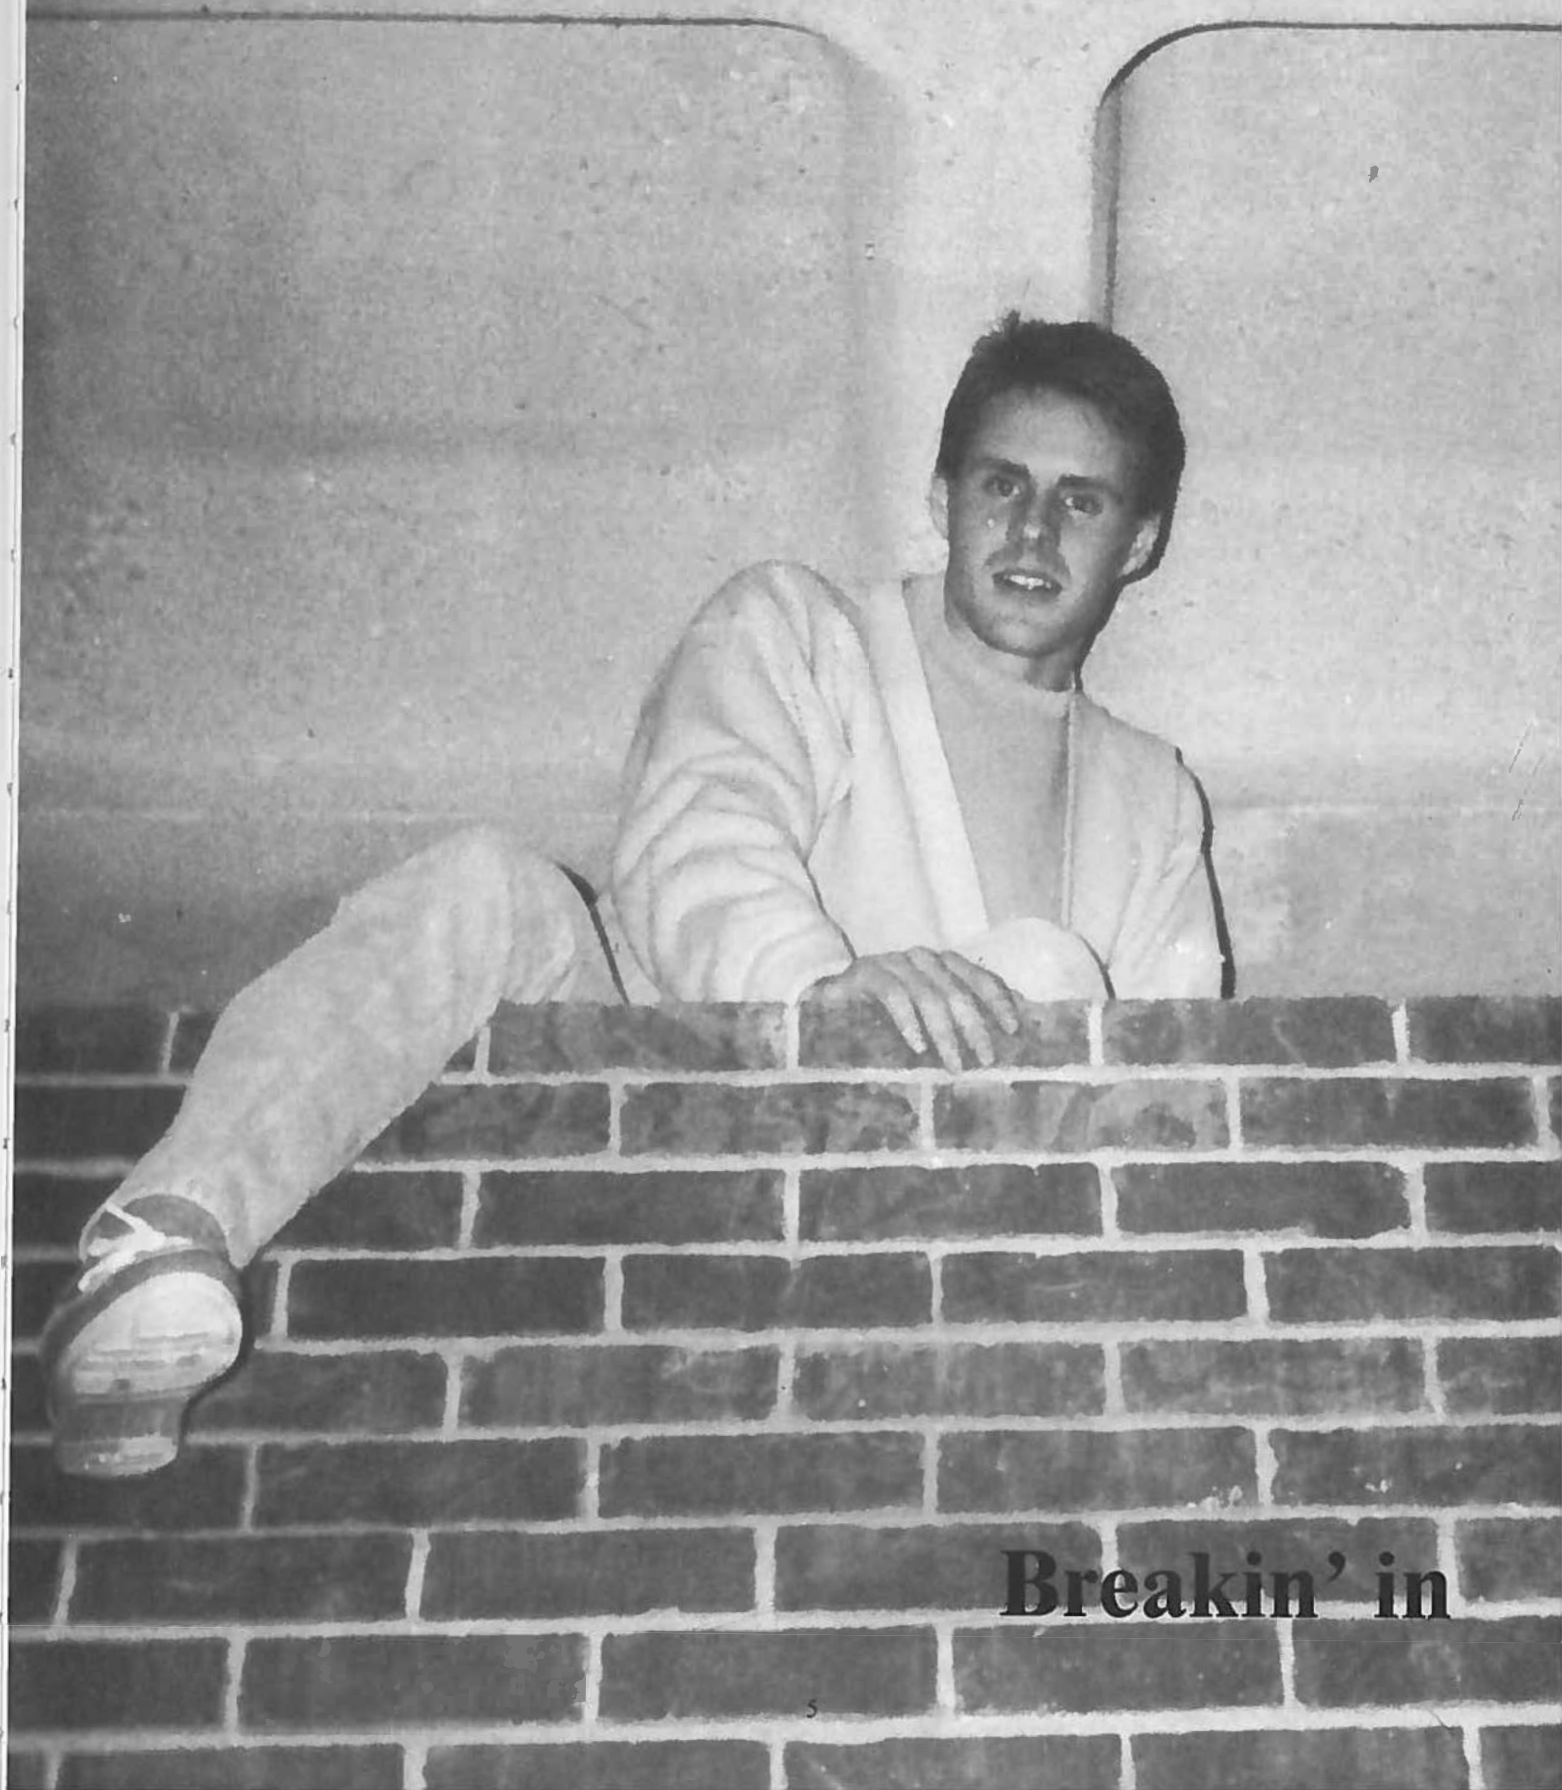

From all the faculty and staff, thanks for the enjoyable times we have shared, and warmest good wishes for the days to come.

D. T. Anderson, Q.C.

Surfing Team

Matt Turner, Hardev Bains, Keith Boulter.

Facing no meaningful opposition, these boys claimed victory every time they came in contact with the water, or other liquids.

Men's Basketball

Jeff Kitchen, Cliff Proudfoot, Jerry Flexer, Don Campbell, Dan Overall. Missing: Jim McLandress, Mario Lebar, Clayton Loewen, Gerry Doak, and many others.

There were two teams this year with both teams putting in a good showing. There were just too many talented players on the other teams for Jerry and Don to outscore.

Football

This team won the first playoff round, but was beaten out in the second.

Ladies' Volleyball

Back: Michelle Mann, Pam Reimer, Karen Beauchamp, Joan Holmstrom. Front: Laura Martin, Melanie Reimer, Colleen Wilson. The team made it to the playoffs.

Ladies' Basketball

Pam Reimer, Melanie Reimer, Joan Holmstrom, Janis Wankling, Judy Payne.

Apparently all the other teams were scared off, as no games were played.

Ladies' Soccer

Back: Karen Beauchamp, Sandra Antoniani, Colleen Wilson. Front: Pam Reimer, Melanie Reimer, Wendy Warrenchuk, Diana Rooswinkel. Missing: Marilyn Slawinsky, Barb Kondracki.

The team had a glorious season, winning the pennant after many well-earned, hard-fought victories!

Hockey

Don Campbell, Steve Dvorak, Mike Hicks, "Huddy", Dave Hicks, Keith Ferbers, John Christie, Glen Agar, Jeff Norton, Greg Tramley. Missing: Bob Brazzell, Thor Hansell, Cliff Proudfoot, Shaun Partridge.

The Bears annihilated all opposition and won the championship this year.

Indoor Soccer

Back: Mark Ferbers, Jerry Flexer, Don Campbell. Front: Keith Ferbers, Jeff Kitchen, Thor Hansell.

The indoor team was expected to go all the way this year but got stopped in the playoffs by the eventual winner.

President's Message

First of all, I'd like to thank all the students and staff at Robson Hall who made my year as President of the M.L.S.A. such a memorable (and time-consuming) one.

Along with the usual socials, committees, speakers and sports, this year's Council successfully accomplished some major projects; the deferral of student loan repayment in the articling year, the beginnings of an alumni pledge program, and the sending of a Manitoban team to the Canada Law Student Games for the first time. Less successful ventures included a controversial beer 'n skits evening and a cancelled social in March. (So much for leaving you guys in the black.)

The February Coffeehouse was undoubtedly a highlight of the year, a showcase of law school talent, featuring, of course, our infamous Glee Club.

Kudos, as well, to law's intramural teams, especially men's hockey and women's soccer — champions of the entire university league. Curling changed locations from the Granite to the Winter Club this year. But most students who decided to bypass a B. Sniedeman course still spent their Friday afternoons on the ice.

First year law students got the benefit of a "new and improved" curriculum — no Agency and a useful Legal Methods (L.R.W.) course although they had to suffer through Constitutional Law and extra credits in first year.

Second years made it through Litigation, Tax and Legal Aid as well as a horrid exam schedule in April. Only one more year to go, guys!

"Paper Chase — the third year": Intensives took us beyond moot court and hypotheticals — real clients and real facts — scary stuff, but fewer exams; late nights on the Law Journal, neverending grad fundraising and major papers to resurrect our L.R.W. skills. But, law school was not too shabby in retrospect, right?

Well, best of luck to next year's Council and the student body. The friendships made here the past three years made me realize that there really are half-decent lawyers (or at least law students) around. Good luck to those of you staying on for another year or two stint at Robson Hall. (Keep your lockers clean and your teeth brushed and you'll go far.)

To the rest of us: Congratulations on your L.L.B., thanks for the memories and see you in court!

Yours truly,

Lisa Pindera

Editor's Message

This has been a year of "firsts" for the Manitoba Law Journal. The most dramatic change has been our new computer system which allows us to do our editing electronically, giving us greater control over our manuscripts. Also, for the first time first year law students have been invited to participate in the Manitoba Law Journal. They were involved in putting together an index of volumes 1 to 15 which will be published this year as a separate issue, inaugurating MLJ's move from three issues a year to four.

It has been an exciting and hectic year for all of us at MLJ and we would like to thank all those who helped us get through it — all the students and staff who donated their time and energy, those who helped with our annual fund raising Bingo event, and all the members of the MLJ committee. We wish Jayne Kapac, the new Editor-in-Chief, and her Staff all the best during their year at MLJ.

Wrds From Yor Editur

I wuz sprized to find myself chozen as yor Yrbk Editur this yr as I had only offrd to help with this and ended up doing too much work on it. I could have uzed a yr wrking undr somebody else az I hav nevr dun this before and maybe wasnt reddy, eh? Duz it show?

Since I wuz chozen I have tried to do the best job I could but if there ar any mistakes they ar my falt. Dont hit me tho. Some pepl have helpd me esp. the guys with there pitures above and the rest of them no hoo they ar. Thanx to evrybody in this bunch.

Won thing I have tried to do this yr is to make next yrs job easier than I found it. If ther ar futur Yrbk editurs reading this, ther shoud be a 'pitfal report' somewher unles the MLSA haz throne it out which Im shore they wont. It haz bin proofred bettr than this so dont worry. Also this Yrbk shoud be out by Septembr to boost sales & advertizing next tyme. (This bk could not be made w/out this revenu and I thank everybody hoo supported us somehow.) We had to eeliminat some stuff like 1st & 2nd yr awards to do this but I thot this wuz best for later on so dont hit me.

I gess this is all. I shoud say it was fun and I learnd a lot which is tru but kind of sappy. You cant do this job at all w/out enjoying it somehow and I think the next sukker will find that out.

Third Year

Lotsa time & effort went into this.

What the heck have we got, anyhow?

Stephen Aftanas By day, Stephen is definitely corporate material: lean, steely-eyed, cold and calculating. But by night, a strange metamorphosis occurs. Stephen becomes "P.P. the wonder waiter" at the Keg, a true party animal. How long can Stephen hide this alter ego? My guess is until he starts articling and has to work evenings.

Glen Agar Through three years of law school, Glen's colleagues came to identify two major aspects of his personality. First, he is obviously a sportsman, having been involved in virtually all the athletic activities going on at Robson Hall or in which our faculty had a representing team. Both fortunately and unfortunately, his performance was always adequate. Secondly, he soon manifested a unique ability to run on at the mouth without actually conveying any message. Many hours were spent listening to Glen not tell stories. Rest assured these two characteristics will suit him well as he pursues his career, and other trifles, at the auspicious though little known firm of Pigblatter and Hogskin.

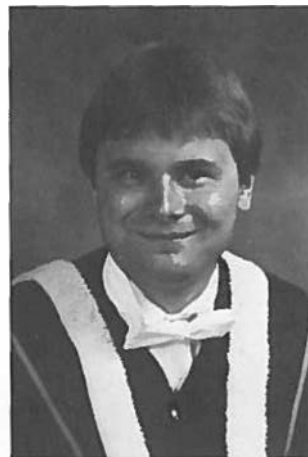

Karen Beauchamp As well as serving as women's sports rep these past two years, Karen was busy as one of the organizers of a team for the Canada Law Student Games. She was also a key player with the Schmengees mixed softball team (formerly the Legal Eagles). Karen is interested in family law and has acquired valuable experience doing research on native rights law. We're sure her talents will be most appreciated by the people at D'Arcy and Deacon, where she will article after the 'kid' is born — hers and hubby Doug's first. Congratulations!

Eleanor Andres Weary from waving goodbye to generations of law students, Eleanor, our resident half-timer, converted to full-time status this year. Good luck at Simkin Gallagher and don't forget to "watch out for that learning curve".

Candace Bishoff It's a wonder that Candace found time for law school between her shopping exhibitions and Jets' games. Candace will be articling at Pitblado and the "old boys' club" had better watch out. Candace's ambition is to become the highest paid corporate lawyer in North America. Her fate will be to end up as a law school professor . . .

Douglas Brown "Dougie" became disillusioned with the establishment working at Sears which failed to make him a junior executive. Struck by a desire to offer legal services to the oppressed, he became Legal Aid's man, needed by many, loved by few. His fervor not quite sated, Dougie will bring his street smarts and experience to Aikins MacAulay, where he hopes to litigate for the little guy (for a reasonable fee).

Denis Asseiro

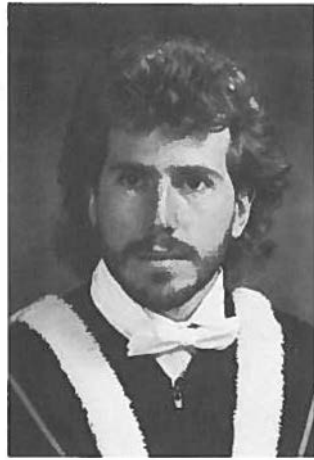

Jana Barak

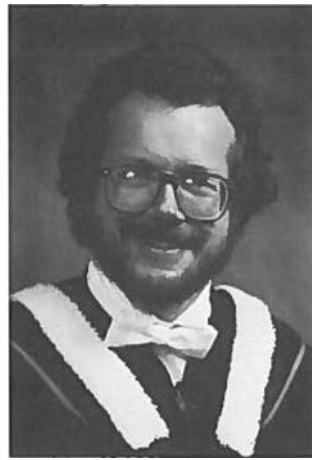

Robert Brazzell

Brenda Chartrand Brenda's husband knew that law school had taken its toll on their love life when discussions on Real Property were substituted for foreplay. The result — a new little remainderperson. Brenda's grasp of legal issues ("murder is a very serious thing") should help her achieve her ambition as a partner in Taylor, Chartrand, McCaffrey. Fate: Bob's legal secretary.

Brent Cooper Brent could most often be found throughout his law school days discussing and criticizing the daily comic strips with his colleagues over several coffees. Never one to overreact, he could be heard on the first day of every new course muttering "I don't understand this stuff . . . I'm going to fail . . . we're all going to die!" An avid sports enthusiast, Brent signed up for every intramural team. The fact that he never showed up for any of the games is simply a technicality which will be overlooked for the purpose of this write-up. Conversations with Brent usually consist of a combination of puns, play on words, and absurd generalizations. Because of his extensive experience with Legal Aid, and the fact that he did poorly on the Ancient Roman section of the ethics exam, we feel he will fit in nicely at Wolch, Pinx.

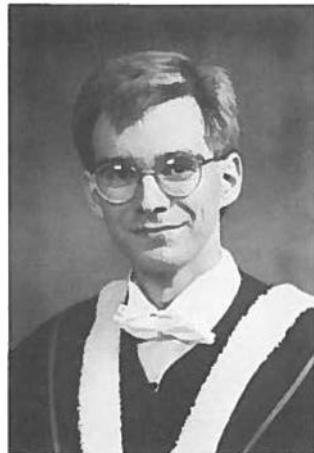

John Cunningham John likes to take a little jazz with his law. Already an accomplished advocate (Greenbergs et cetera), he knows how to save a few "tasty licks" for his courthouse "gigs". With his extensive management background we expect John will soon be "playing a few tunes" in the financial district as well. In addition to his law school "scores" he has many and wide ranging interests including oriental philosophy and ethnic music. With an ear for a good tune and an eye for a good case, we're certain John will find much success in "rehearsal" with Walsh & Company and later on when he starts to "practice" with the "big bands" in the "bar circuit". All-in-all we think John will prove to be a fine solicitor. Play it again, John!

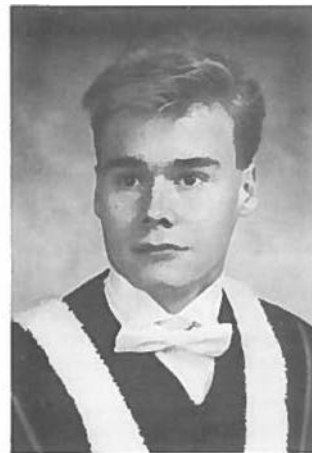

Odette Coccola Our resident Corsican-Canadian, Odette hails from balmy British Columbia. If Odette is not having coffee in the Common Room with friends, she may be protesting class changes or beating other future lawyers on the tennis or racketball courts. Our third year rep on the MLSA, Odette has always stood up for the rights of her fellow students, even though this has proved to be taxing. If Victor keeps moving, Odette, you may end up being qualified to practice across Canada! We'll miss you.

Jack Courtney Jack's journey through Law School, as well as Life, centers around his motto "Oh, well". Adding a chuckle to strengthen its power, Jack has survived every course whether he attended lectures or Willsfully missed them all. With a penchant for the equivocal, Jack fortuitously found a girl to share his name. But Jack was not one to involve himself in law school functions, and could it be that he never did return from his Second Year hiatus and all of Law School was a dream?

Svjatoslav Ciaputa

Matthew Cooper-Williams

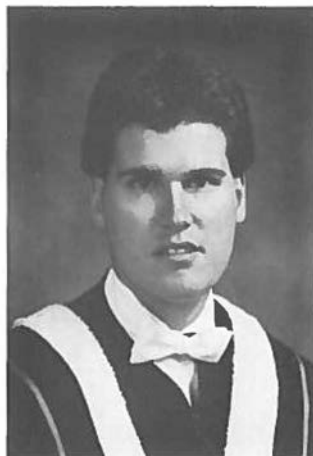

Harold Dick Harold (oh gosh) Dick can often be heard discussing ethical dilemmas with students and professors. As well as being on the Dean's Team (his greatest desire), Harold was instrumental in forming the Articling Committee of the MLSA. As part of his extracurricular activities, Harold did time at the Youth Centre. Perhaps this North End boy will be the one most likely to install an alarm system in his River Heights home.

Jane Dennis

Rhonda Dunwoody Since she did so well at maintaining law and order with her five children, Rhonda decided she could easily handle the law courts. In spite of the weather, car problems and innumerable hours on legal aid, Rhonda did manage to attend most classes, albeit usually a few minutes late, with her breakfast in tow. Now that she has a new car Rhonda will be able to maintain her daily trips to the city to article with Savino & Co.

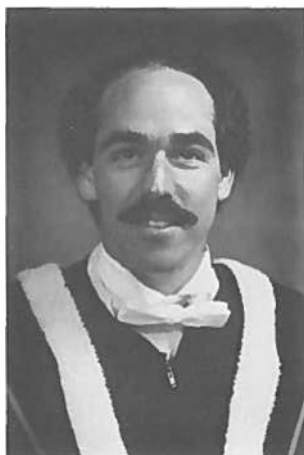

Blair Filyk Robson Hall's common room shall always be haunted by Blair's ghost, jealously protecting his precious newspaper or pompously tilting his tea-filled thermos, even on the hottest spring days. The library was also a venue Blair commonly would attend, wherein he would meticulously write and rewrite his "bronze-medal" study-notes. This practice paid off time and again with marks that epitomized mediocrity. Though few knew it, Blair may have been the funniest and wittiest person to go through law school. Unfortunately for his closest colleagues, the truth of the above would often be made apparent during class lectures, the resulting laughter more than once putting Blair's captive audience under the inquisitive and scornful glares of the professor.

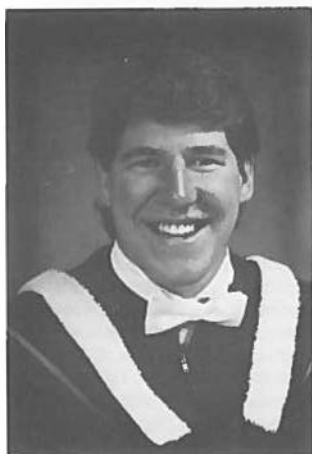

Pat Fraser Although she was rarely seen with her nose in a book, and avoided the Law Library like the plague, Pat still managed to garner the highest average in each of her three years at Robson Hall. In spite of numerous awards and honours, Pat managed to keep her brilliance from interfering with her sense of fun and her down to earth qualities. As she heads off to Brandon to begin articling with Meighen, Haddad, we will miss not only Pat's presence among us, but in particular, her marvellous sound system and incredible tape collection for our parties.

Gerry Doak

Jerry Flexer Jerry is a basketball hound
Being an accountant his future is sound
Came to school for the sports
Preferring soccer to torts
And now is Pitblado bound.
Good luck at Pitblado & Hoskin, Jerry.

Robert Dowhan

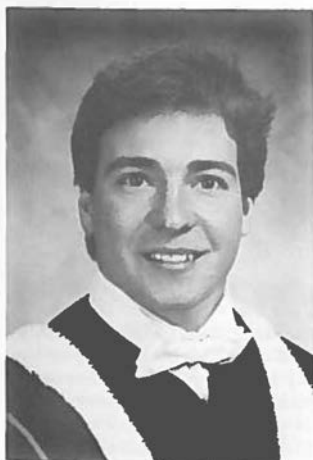

Keith Ferbers

Joe Gallagher Anyone who has gotten to know Joe during his years here agrees that he should be the standard against which all other of "Winnipeg's finest" should be rated. Several accomplishments stand out: being selected as Solomon-Greenberg participant in 1984, and getting a smile out of "Miss Chuckles" in 1983. Good luck in your articles with the City of Winnipeg Legal Department!

Raymond Hall Raymond is the highest flying member of our graduating class. He flies high on DC9s — and gets paid for it! His expertise in communications has been tapped by many students and profs. Linda Vincent thanks him for explaining ROM, RAM and chips to her intellectual property class. Butch Nepon thanks him for the advice about dishes — satellite not china! We thank him for opening up his home to us for post-exam communication seminars. Raymond owns more copyrights than any other student at Robson Hall. He will be busy next year articling at Taylor, Brazell, McCaffrey, flying DC9s and tracking down infringers!

Greg Hawrysh

Shirley Gauthier Neither rain, sleet, nor snow has kept Shirley from making her weekly trek from Dryden to attend Robson Hall. Despite repeated vows to "work this year", Shirley has probably read more pages of fiction than law cases in the last three years. We're sure the other travellers on the Trans Canada will be relieved to hear that Shirley will be staying in Dryden to article.

Roger Gripp In some circles, "the Gripper" is regarded as a ladies' man and world traveller, rumoured to have wealth beyond his needs. In others, he is "Dodge", a man with a chivalresque and contented spirit. As for Roger himself, he's just concerned about getting to class on time. In fact, he's not so sure about law school anyway. After hearing about articling wages, the C.P.R. never looked so good. But "the Gripper" has ambition. We're sure he'll be a partner in his firm in no time. "Pitblado, Hoskin & Gripp" has a nice ring to it.

Arpita Gupta This lovely lady dropped out of sight for a few weeks during third year to have an appendectomy. But she came back (lucky for us!) as gorgeous as ever. "Arp" was a co-editor of the '85-86 yearbook and circulation editor for the MLJ in '86-87. Her charm convinced R.W. to stay in Winnipeg. Arpita will be found on Broadway at the A.-G.s next year.

Don Hewak Being a former model for Gentleman's Quarterly Don quickly established himself as the biggest clothes horse in Robson Hall. Six foot two, handsome and always dressed to a tee Smokestack had to beat off his admirers. A strong performance as Cam Harvey during First Year Beer & Skits was Don's springboard to fame. Often referred to as "One Suave Duck" his knowledge of movie trivia and razor wit enabled Don to break us up at will. Glee Club baritone, movie reviewer extraordinaire and Beer & Skits scriptwriting were a few of the numerous talents that led to the Attorney General's poorly reasoned decision in taking Don on as an articling student — none of us are safe.

Lowell Harvey Our strawberry blond yuppie preferred the atmosphere at Dutch Maid to the hallowed halls of Robson Hall. His boyish good looks became the topic of Miss Looselips' column in second year. He was an '85-86 Yearbook co-editor. Lowell's "plastic" shopping sprees are in no danger of extinction as Lowell will be doing his suburban articles at Grant Punk Plaza with Sinclair and Edmond.

F. Alexander Jackson (With commentary) What can be said about Alex that he hasn't been slandered with already? (Not much!) Alex comes to us from the collection department of the Bank of Montreal where it is rumoured he used a crowbar to "pry loose" excess funds from his customers. (It's a lie! I never used a crowbar. They are bulky and hard to conceal! I hired a bailiff — also bulky and hard to conceal.) Thus he has become known as "The Enforcer". (You mean Clint Eastwood or Humphrey Bogart?!) Anyway, Alex, who tells me he's finished with law (after three years of law school, I intend to do something useful!) will be moving to that great metropolis of Minnedosa (What do you think about "Lord Jackson of Minnedosa?") where he has been adopted by the husband and wife team of Sims and Sims as the little lawyer they never had. (Clever!)

Romana Hur Everyone knows this Ukrainian songbird because of her early and continued involvement in Robson Hall activities. Romana has busied herself as treasurer of MLSA, has been a dedicated member of the Glee Club and Graduation Committee, and was the 1987 Class Valedictorian. For Ro, where there's a "will" there's a way — but it's better than an "A"! This blonde haired, blue eyed beauty will be articling with Simkin Gallagher.

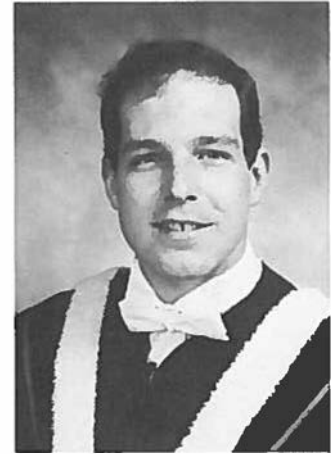

Darcia Kohuch Darcia has greeted the law school with a smile, an ever-ready battle cry of "Stress!", and that all-important question: "Do I have time to go to the bathroom and get a coffee before my next class?" She has been kept very busy throughout law school with her work for the Legal Aid clinic, the Manitoba Law Journal, various church activities, and, most important of all, Robson Hall's Glee Club! We hope that Skwark, Myers will give Darcia enough time to continue her singing career at Act II.

Guy Joubert Our only non-procrastinator. Hardworking and conscientious. Loves a laugh. Solomon Greenberg contender and a student senator. Insists on calling that suitcase a briefcase. "Like to see some photos of my daughter or do you have classes today?"

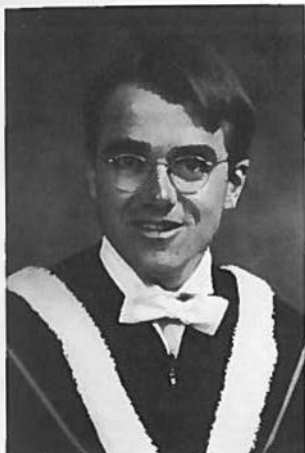

Brenda Kaminski For someone who was never sure that she wanted to be here, you couldn't tell from her marks. Ah yes, Brenda is a woman of many talents. She can: cry on cue at moot Labour Arbitration hearings, compose a do-it-yourself divorce kit, and juggle how many men in how many days? Throughout her stint at Robson Hall, Brenda has been very involved with the Articling Committee, the Legal Aid clinic, the Manitoba Law Journal, and the Glee Club (in addition to valiantly attempting to read Anna Karenina). Rumour has it that Brenda will someday chair the tax subsection — a brilliant "deduction?" While you're being "taxed" at TDS, remember Brenda, "it's been real. Keep in touch!"

Douglas Emlyn Jones It is safe to say that in the last three years, no students, staff or faculty members have spent more time within the confines of Robson Hall than Doug. If not engaged in various extra-curricular activities, he can often be seen late at night working on his highly coveted study notes, which he will soon have copyrighted. Doug was drafted in the first round by several firms, but it will be the good fortune of Aikins MacAulay to have him as an articling student.

Francine Lee On the road again . . . Mrs. Lee can be seen speeding down the highway usually avoiding tickets. Francine has all the advantages, including a built-in tutor and future partner. Several dozen roses guarantees she'll never need the services of Freda Steel. Just ask Brock! This law family is ruled by Judge and Court in their Carmen home.

Dave Lewis This personable import from Morris has graced our law school after stabs at Agriculture, Phys. Ed. and Ballet. What's next, Dave? We hear Dentistry needs a few well-dressed men. Owner of some of the best ties in law school, Dave distinguished himself as titular head of the Robson Hall Glee Club. His goals for the future include being the best dang family lawyer to win the Tour de France. After that, a gentleman farmer/lawyer, in the mold of John Irvine? For now, he will have to content himself with articling at Simkin, Gallagher.

Melanie Logan Lauth Melanie's motto must be "have briefcase will travel". She has successfully juggled her job with the Attorney-General, a number of voluntary commitments, and her role as University Benchler, while "mothering" the whole Third Year class! The only sign that Melanie is having a bad day is if her earrings don't match her clothes! Through all this, she managed to raise two teens who were, at the time of this writing, not yet delinquents. In spite of her part in the "Articling Year" study, this Solomon Greenberger won a spot at Wolch Pinx. They must have recognized Melanie as a person with a "Lauth" on the ball!

Danalyn MacKinnon It's still a mystery to Danalyn's friends why she gave up her various lucrative careers (including Diesel Mechanic and Teacher) to pursue the study of law. She made the Native Peoples course bearable to her classmates by providing nautical musical interludes. Distinguished recipient of the tail-end award in curling in first year. Returning to her beloved northwestern Ontario to promulgate family strife.

Heather McLaren Along with all the demands of a busy life as wife and mother, Heather has succeeded in tackling the rigors of full-time law school. Formerly a physiotherapist and teacher, she has managed to manipulate these many demands and yet always has time for a cup of coffee and a chat with friends. Heather's activities don't end with family and school responsibilities. She is active in curling, church, the law journal, takes periodic escape trips south of the border, and is on hand for her three sons' sports and school functions. It is a good career change for Heather to go into law if only to advise her husband in his budding new business as a pink flamingo Christmas decoration entrepreneur. All the best next year at T.D.S. Heather. There is no doubt you will handle articling with the same grace you have displayed at Robson Hall.

Linda Mark Linda will be remembered for her big, warm smile and her incredible ability to study. Destined for a career in corporate law, she left Robson Hall half way through third year for the better weather in Victoria. She'll be articling in Vancouver with Clark, Wilson.

Gordon MacKintosh "Apple" is a litigator to the core. He has earned the distinctions of being the winner of the Solomon Greenberg and Western Moot Court competitions and he was a Gale Cup contender. Gordon has certainly ripened into Robson Hall's own version of Horace Rumpole.

Deana Martz Famous for cracking up at unfunny moments in class, Deana seemed to find the Wills course particularly entertaining. Major achievement in first year was when she nonplussed the Dean by demanding to know why his lecture was relevant. As Citator editor she made it a truly informative and sometimes controversial publication. Other contributions were her work in the archives for two years, vocal member of the Library Committee and a leader of the Thermos movement. Her ambition is to make enough money so that she and her trusty friend Tex never have to eat beans again.

Ian MacLeod

Lillian Pan This student of distinction is an adherent to the panic school method of studying for exams. Lillian is also known for her scathing cross-examinations in the Greenbergs and the Westerns, thereby earning her the sobriquet, "Litigious Lil". Robson Hall's bag lady drags her environment with her as she performs the daily duties of Editor of Ms. Lil's Journal a.k.a. The Manitoba Law Journal. When not in her office, Lillian can usually be found in any Willson's store buying massive quantities of stationery. Ms. Lil is headed for the corporate monolith of Tory, Tory in Toronto, where she hopes her legal career will be as glamorous and sublime as that of the lawyers on L.A. Law.

Peter Merkley Peter is a quiet, soft-spoken family man. He's also a denizen of the library. While his intensive training is in the area of family law, he'll no doubt be exposed to all areas of the law at Buetti, Aquila (We didn't know he was a Liberal).

Shelley Nixon As Robson Hall's Pippi Longstocking, Shelley is a true denizen of the library, poring over the tomes learning about fee simples and entails. The Rule in Shelley's Case is that she can always be found in the library at 8:30 A.M. Shelley is one of the few Winnipeg transplants who enjoys the cold winter and is well known for her outdoor pursuits. Shelley will be returning to B.C. and we wish her well!

Jeffrey Nichols

Jennifer Moroz Robson Halls' top candidate for "classiest dresser", she is conspicuous only by her absence from the social scene that the rest of us thrive on. The last laugh is on us though, since her low profile makes for a definite lack of embarrassing stories to tell. Fortunately for her, she will be gracing the halls of Manitoba Hydro next year — they pay enough to subsidize her clothing budget.

Brad Morrison Brad actually reads beyond headnotes. Known for his ability to cite verbatim from minor and irrelevant dissenting opinions, he is Lord Keith of Krinkle's only living fan. Low point of his law school career was when his new litigation suit came untaped and several inches of hem descended about his ankles. Brad amused himself (and class) in family law by trying, without success, to flag Bertie down.

Marguerite Mousseau Marguerite is trying to reconcile the contradiction of being a flower child in a world of yuppies (yes, Marguerite, the Beetle is dead and the B.M.W. lives!) The highlights of "Mouse's" Robson Hall years include: the prestigious Trusts prize, her role as hostess of Speakers' Hour, membership in M.A.W.L., the tail-end award in curling, and being told she wasn't aggressive enough in Intensive Admin. This survivor of the 60's will be heading back to the land of Bill Vander Zalm and Gracie's finger (i.e. B.C.) with Bruce. Marguerite will be articling with the Broads on Broad Street in Vancouver. While at the firm of Brown Acheson, she will be inculcated with her principal's philosophy: most people who are arrested are guilty, women are easier to work with, and psychologists and social workers are weird.

Kevin Pshebniski

Allison Peters Like the welder in "Flashdance", Allison returned to Robson Hall in the fall of 1985 and uttered the following pronouncement: "Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose". A devotee of Bogie flicks, she wrote her Bus. Org. final exam replete with references to "Casablanca", "The Maltese Falcon" and "The Treasure of Sierra Madre". Query: How did Professor Braid respond to her concluding statement, "Here's looking at you, Art?" and did he regret naming one of the "Exam Characters" Sam Spade? Articling in the civil litigation department at Walsh, Micay next year, she hopes her principal will allow her to hang one large but discreet poster of Bruce Springsteen in her cubbyhole. Ambition: To grow old gracefully. Fate: To sport the "Madonna" look at age 65.

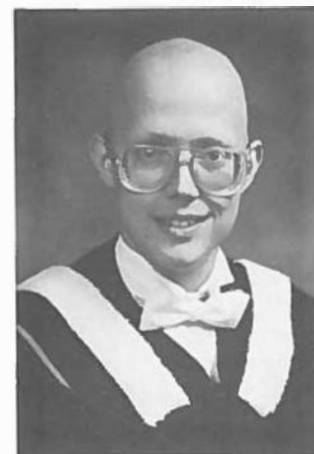

Judy Payne Judy is the only true Judy of the "three Judy's". She is a three year veteran of the women's basketball team and showed her stuff this year when she took home the 2nd prize in the Lawyer-Student Golf Tourney. This fun-loving blonde has decided to forgo the balmy B.C. winters and golf games with her law school buddy to article in Winnipeg with Great West Life. Oh well, Jude, you would have been homesick for Winnipeg when it hits -40 C and you couldn't be here to enjoy it! Good luck next year and move to Vancouver soon!!

Lisa Pindera This peripatetic miss was involved in every committee known to mankind, as well as being President of M.L.S.A. Her resume is as thick as the Greater New York phone book. Robson's favourite female jock is also known far and wide for throwing the best parties in law school, but she's never at them for more than five minutes herself! After spending the summer working/surfing for a law firm in Sydney, Australia, Lisa is following the sun to Lotus Land, where she will be entering the corporate world articling with Freeman & Co. of Vancouver. Her only problem in future life will be to match track shoes and a mohawk with a dark blue suit.

Herbert H. Rempel "Mr. Jessup" is well known for his Bugs Bunny impersonations. Herb always has a bounce to his step and a song in his heart. These innate abilities should keep him in good stead as he will be hopping from his job at Canadian Pacific's legal department to a clerkship with the Court of Appeal midway through his articling year.

David Rose Our resident cynic, Dave was punished late in his law school career for his earlier decadence and general scruffiness. To his surprise and chagrin, he was forced to give up his long hair and bulldog runners, and take on a more sombre demeanor (evidence: the engagement band on his finger). Among Dave's many pet peeves are: deferred exams, being bugged about his "toybox" (briefcase), coming "this close" to winning "the gold", and having to listen to profs' verbosity. Dave is a sanctimonious sort of Mennonite bent on bettering society, which explains his summers spent at the Manitoba Anti-Poverty Organization and his future career with Legal Aid. He certainly doesn't fool the rest of us, as his recent comments about "putting Dianne to work" indicate that money is no small motivator for him. Best of luck in the future, Dave — call us when you land your first big corporate job.

Conrado Santos

Will Scutt Will is a rough and ready sportsman from Kenora, Ontario. Never one to let law school get in the way of real life, his real life includes fighting fires, flying planes, and Cheryl. His ability to get maximum output from minimum input and his winning disposition will make him a real asset to the Kenora firm of Hook and Seller.

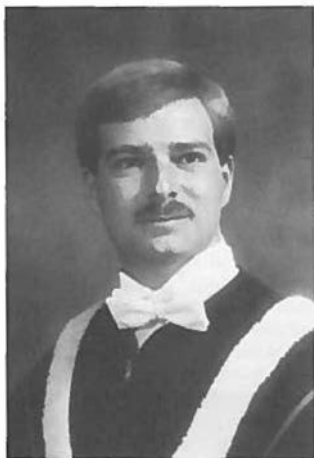

Katrina Prystupa Katrina is Robson Hall's foremost proponent of the NDP party. Her ambition is to be Canada's first female NDP Prime Minister, but her fate is to fall in love with a "Tory". When Katrina's not moving or taking part in political rallies, she's no doubt at home ducking from unidentifiable flying bits of her electrical heater. I've phoned her a number of times only to hear appliances blowing up in the background. Katrina's a great friend who doesn't mind being called up the night before a final exam by a panic-stricken last-minute crammer. On behalf of those of us who have been lucky enough to know Katrina — Thanks.

Kim Smith Kim is a welcome addition from Dalhousie. How can you not like someone who always has a smile on her face — even in Land Titles! Kim will be articling in the family law department of Walsh, Micay.

Edward Sellers Ed will be remembered for his long-winded and convoluted questions which led many students to pull out their dictionaries if not their hair. Since first year, Ed has been a leader at the Granite and is now skipping to victory at the Winter Club. Ed's dream of corporate power will no doubt be achieved amid the skyscrapers of Bay Street with Fraser & Beatty.

John David Stefaniuk One of the only law students who knows the lyrics to most Motown tunes off by heart, but can never remember the facts of Donoghue v. Stevenson. Besides his penchant for wine, women and song, John has a keen entrepreneurial mind and a passing interest in law, which has kept him on the Dean's list year after year. These attributes will serve him well as an articling student at Thompson, Dorfman and as a clerk to the Manitoba Court of Appeal.

Judy Slagerman Gregarious, turbulent and irrepressible. The self-proclaimed vixen of Robson Hall. Boundless energy, endless quips and unparalleled involvement. An indelible presence whose witty, charming personality and stellar beer and skit performances leaves one . . . plum out of adjectives.

Kathy Stefanchuk Kathy's enthusiastic good nature has cheered up a good many depressed law student. She is well-known for tales of painstakingly arranged practical jokes (remember the popcorn?), and for her love of driving. It's still not clear, however, whether her Rabbit convertible or the Mack SuperLiner truck is her first love. A fearless servant, she helped dig Winnipeg out of the Great Blizzard of '86. Famous last words: "I've flunked Tax — When are the Supps?" She then signed up for Tax II. Kathy has decided not to article and instead will move to Las Vegas to collect socks. When she becomes bored with that, she will pursue an MBA — the business world always fascinated her more than the law.

Leanne Rutley One of the more dedicated students and partiers at Robson Hall, Leanne even spent her summers there with PLEA and MINI-U. This dedication was further evidenced by the fact that Leanne was the only first year to do breakfast with the second and third years after Ray Hall's year-ender. Leanne also served on a number of committees and could often be heard serenading the masses at Glee Club. As well as a dedicated student, Leanne is also a dedicated friend and we wish her the best during her articling year at McJannet Weinberg Rich.

Marilyn Slawinsky Marilyn reaches beyond her immediate fulltime occupation of law school to find herself entrenched in such exploits as the annual UND exchange trip, Friday curling, and the lawyer/student bonspiel, all with varying degrees of sobriety and sometimes with full costume and makeup. She does the difficult immediately, the impossible takes a little longer, right Fred?

Anita Southall Anita's sharp wit has often lightened the atmosphere at Robson Hall. She is not complete without O.C. at her side. Anita enjoys curling and can often be spotted doing the bunny hop as she sweeps. We know she'll do well as a litigator as evidenced by her performance in the Greenbergs. Seven long years of hard work has paid off for this babe in the woods!

Mary Ann Stanchell As our tireless PLEA director, Mary Ann learned to do amazing things on a shoe-string budget. This should stand her in good stead for her articling year, which she will spend at Taylor Brazzell McCaffrey. Mary Ann is the only person we know who can constantly allude to her perceived weight problem (we still haven't figured that one out), but who at the same time persists in talking, thinking, and making FOOD. She is a faithful subscriber to "Chocolatier" magazine. Throughout her years at Robson Hall, we've seen Mary Ann suffer through problems with the Volvo, professors she "wasn't fond of", hair that wouldn't behave, classmates that were "too young to remember", and inconvenient "vacations". But, Mary Ann, you made it through in one piece, and we'd like to wish you all the best in the future.

Ginette Tognet Underneath that righteous, studious exterior, there is a true French woman never revealed to her friends at law school who loves fast cars, cases of Henkell Trocken and staying up 'til all hours in the morning. The 1986 summer was difficult for Ginette trying to educate the European French men about the virtues of Canadian French women, but it is rumoured that her persistence was even greater than their persistence. She will be remembered for making it all the way through 1st year Contracts without Schwartz asking her a question and for her incredible chocolate amaretto cheesecakes. Unlike most of her fellow colleagues Ginette preferred a 3 year articling program joining Clarkson & Gordon to become a C.A. However should she change her mind she plans to pursue yet another degree in attempts to have more letters behind her last name than in front of it. Good luck Ginette whatever you're doing and wherever you are!

Lesley Tough "Attention Bay Day Shoppers!" Lesley "meet you at the Bay" Tough is the pride and joy of Wilder, Wilder. Her law school activities have included Administrative Editor of the MLJ, work with Elizabeth Fry, and Legal Aid. Lesley's main contribution to the law is her promulgation of the doctrine of culpable stupidity — a response to Pappajohn. Lesley will also be working for the Man. C.A.; she will be helping her boss, Sterling, in subordinating the Charter to the principle of Parliamentary Supremacy and fighting the spread of Marxism within the province.

Kent Strang The class philosopher and Howdy Doody look-alike, Kent's searching queries had the profs trembling at the sight of his upraised hand. His secret ambition is to be a cowboy crooner, but he'll have to settle for a career in family law. As part of our illustrious Jessup Cup team, Kent distinguished himself more for all-night debauchery in Quebec bistros than for oratory, yet still managed to be the guiding force behind Beer 'n Skits. Good luck to Kent, who will be articling at Kaufman Cassidy.

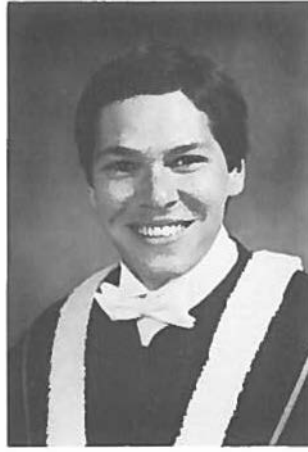

David Vincent

Barbara Yapps Barbara came to Robson Hall after working ten years for the Faculty Association and accumulating degrees at night. Known for her mass photo-copying techniques, Barb will keep Xerox Stock at the top of the Dow Jones for years to come. She is tight-lipped about her experience in Intensive Family Law, but can say with certainty that she'd prefer to limit her family law practice to labour problems. Next year will see her selling her soul at McJannet Weinberg (every day of the week)!

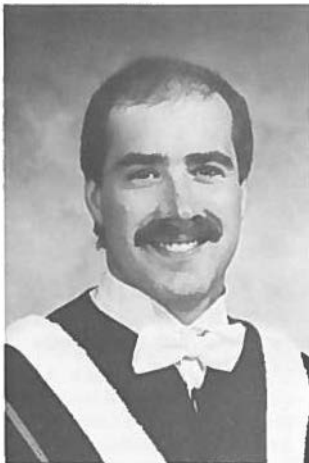

Donna Thompson Donna left a nursing career in the far north (read down to: Arctic) for the not-so-far north (read down to: E.K.) to study law. She will be remembered for: her well stocked brief case; her thermos; being the only one in Bertie Bass' family law class to know the marriage customs of the Inuit; in Butch Nepon's administrative law class to know about (and be able to pronounce!) the Inuit Tapirisut; and her license plate which reads, subliminally, "Hit Me". Good luck Donna in your articling with Legal Aid. P.S. Why not buy a bus pass next year — it has to be cheaper than driving!

Robert White Jr. A native of Memphis, "Mitch" ended up at Robson Hall as a second-year transferee following completion of his first-year studies at Gonzaga State College (Where?) After living in Los Angeles and Washington State, Mitch married a Canadian and decided that Winnipeg was the place he really wanted to be (certainly not on account of the weather!) Even though Mitch has endured the Robson Hall Landlord & Tenant course, our favourite Tennessee Volunteer still prefers the "shotgun approach" to property management. Mitch is slated to article at Newman MacLean, but that may depend on what he "dredges" up in L.A.

Janis Wankling One of the notorious "Three Judy's", Jan would have enjoyed law school had it not interfered with her sleep and golf game. Her claim to fame is her membership on the Dean's Team and her extensive medical knowledge. Jan demonstrated her easy-going and tolerant nature by acting with "the boys" at beer and skits, playing on Big Doug's curling team, and by entering (and winning) the Lawyer-Student golf tourney. Jan will never forgive Mom & Dad for not sending her to Europe last summer — a condo and car have not relieved her mental distress. Jan is leaving sunny Manitoba for her retirement home in the mountains, Vancouver's Camprey and Murphy. Good luck, Jan — we'll miss your taco chips and cider!

Rob Warner He's got most people at Robson Hall thinking that he's a real nice guy but inside sources inform us that he cheats at 'hangman' in Wills. This nice guy is also known to bite open aluminum beer cans and fall asleep after drinking about 3,000 oz of the stuff. Rob woke up from one of these deep sleeps with about half a beard and moustache and since then, his face has gone pretty much hairless except for a wee moustache. So as not to leave anyone with a negative impression, Rob really is a sweetheart and an asset to Robson Hall.

Jay Zammit Jay's talents for curling and modelling are surpassed only by his unique (i.e. questionable) driving skills. The "Baron", frequently seen beating about town, occasionally even travels on the road — when not crossing sidewalks and parking inside snowbanks! His feeble attempt at teetotalling ensures Jay will live up to the expectations of the profession.

Valedictory

— Romana Hur

Madam Justice Krindle, Dean Anderson, distinguished guests, faculty members, spouses, invited guests and fellow students:

I would firstly like to take this opportunity to thank you — my classmates — for the honour and the privilege you have bestowed upon me in having chosen me as your valedictorian. Before I go on I should let you know that this probably does not qualify as a valedictory address. You see, I looked up 'valedictory' in the dictionary and found it defined as "A farewell address . . . delivered by a valedictorian." Since I hope to stay in touch with many of you, I won't be saying farewell. Further, the definition of "valedictorian" contains the phrase "a student . . . usually of the highest scholastic standing . . ." Well, that's certainly not a description of me!

Thomas Jefferson said "It is the trade of lawyers to question everything, yield nothing, and to talk by the hour." I'll do my best to keep this short.

We survived the 'law school experience'. Three years ago we first set foot in Robson Hall. Remember how foreign everything seemed to us then? Like that room with all those strange things in frames hanging on the walls. You know — the Transcona room! There were few, if any, familiar faces. Now, three years later, that building has become like a second home. You can walk in just about anytime and find a friendly face, someone to chat with . . . anything to avoid studying!

What happened in that three year span? What is the overall result of the anxieties, the boredom, the laughter, the uncertainties and the hard labour that we shared? First: we have received an introduction to the law. A firm foundation has been set, upon which we can build our knowledge and understanding not only of the law and the legal system, but also our knowledge and understanding of people and the human condition. It is, after all, human events which form and shape the law. With the growth of such knowledge and understanding we can hope to make the world a better place.

Let us thank the professors of Robson Hall. Without their patience, their willingness to assist, their ridiculously long exams . . . without their special efforts, we would not be the people who we are today — the ones developing ulcers, greying prematurely, and suffering from high blood pressure!

Our thanks also to the 'behind-the-scenes' people who helped get us to where we are today. Thank you to the library staff, who thought that recarpeting the Library during first year April exams would dissuade us from carrying on. We persevered! Thank you to the administrative and secretarial staff who got things done and kept things running smoothly — usually. Little do we appreciate the time and energy required to co-ordinate various schedules and activities such as Squash Club parties . . . right, Linda? Thank you to Rosario, the friendly, smiling guardian of the night who kept an eye on the night-owls who liked to study late at Robson Hall. All of these people supported and helped us get here today. And lest we forget, we must also thank the spouses, spousal equivalents (don't you love that term?), friends, and family members who were behind us all the way. We thank them all.

So, we've acquired knowledge and skills. Though some of us may feel that we are not adequately prepared to be loosed on an unsuspecting world, we can take strength from the words of Oscar Wilde who wrote "You know more than you think you know, and want to know more than you do know."

Think of the revelations made to us as early as first year: a "tort(e)" is not merely a fattening European cake; a memo is not a short note; Latin is not a dead language; you know, "Nemo dat quod non habet" . . . and thanks to Dale Gibson, I'll always remember "Raise the hips and lock the door" (Res ipsa loquitur).

Aside from the education we received, something really special happened at law school. An amazing assortment of talented, intelligent, hard-working and fun-loving people were thrown together to struggle through the trials and tribulations of a three year sentence. Those people formed a family, our own special family: the class of '87. I know that each one of us has formed special bonds with certain members of our class. We've developed friendships that will last a lifetime. But along with those special friendships, there are things that we — as a class — shared. There are the events and experiences which have now become part of our common history.

How would we have survived without each other? Who else could empathize with the feelings of panic and terror leading up to our first set of law school exams? How does one convey the emotion of utter dread, that 'empty pit' feeling in one's stomach which comes with having memorized only 300 tort cases? How do you make your mother understand that feeling? It's not possible. Our friends and family members out there in the real world just could not relate to what was happening to us. But thank God, we had each other to depend upon. We commiserated together, shared our anxieties and survived the ordeals!

When we came back for second year there were some changes in our family structure. Some people had moved on, others had transferred in. Do these names bring back memories? Warren Holmes, Shirley Forsyth, Ken Malenko, Wayne Morrow. They weren't around to share the terrifying experience of Litigation. Why didn't we believe the third year students who told us all we had to do was show up, stand up and speak up?

Some of us took the opportunity to escape from the books for a short period and take a glimpse of reality by signing up for a duty day at Legal Aid. Unfortunately, there's nothing in the manual about how to handle a client that shows up slightly intoxicated. Right, Leanne?

Through the difficult and sometimes painful experience there were always the terrific people! I remember an acquaintance asking me sometime during second year whether I was enjoying law school. I informed the person that law school is not an experience which a normal, sane person 'enjoys'. It is rather an ordeal which one undergoes or endures — something like having a cavity in a tooth filled. I did, however, mention the best thing about law school: the people! Our class of '87 really is a mixture, isn't it? What variety! Not only backgrounds and ages, but life experiences. We have a physiotherapist in our midst, and a registered nurse, and an airline pilot . . . not to mention the manager of a Dutch Maid ice cream parlour! We've shared three of the toughest years of our educational life with some of the nicest people we can ever hope to meet.

In thanking our professors for their assistance with our legal education, I neglected to thank them for their friendship. I feel, as do probably most of you who took a class with Butch Nepon, that he drew us closer by sharing with us his very personal experiences of woofing his cookies before every law school exam.

Let's try and remember with clarity the good times we had at Robson Hall. The unpleasant memories we should allow to fade with time.

Although I'm glad to be finished law school (because I'm not a masochist) I am also truly saddened. The camaraderie of law school is past. No more 'bitch and complain' sessions. No more crossword puzzles in the common room. No more Glee Club practices.

Many members of our class are leaving or have left Manitoba to seek their fame and fortune elsewhere. Speaking of fortune, Mitch, are you sure you wouldn't like 80 associates down in California? To those leaving, we bid a fond "Farewell".

As we leave law school behind and enter the practice of law — or an alternative career — I hope that we always remember our days of law school, and keep in mind that special line from the song, "I get by with a little help from my friends."

I salute the wonderful people who have made the last three years not only bearable, but enjoyable and memorable. "Daey Bozhe zdorovolya!" (Ukrainian toast: "God give you health, strength.")

Aloha from Romana
