There are benefits, credits, and tax deductions you could get if you do your taxes every year, even if you have no income.

The Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) uses the information from your income tax and benefit return to calculate your benefit and credit payments, and any related provincial or territorial payments.

Other government departments also use your tax information to calculate your payments, such as the Old Age Security pension and the guaranteed income supplement. If you do your taxes after the deadline, your payments could be delayed.

Benefits, credits, and deductions you could be eligible for

GST/HST credit – If you have a modest income, you could get up to $592 per year. You don’t need to apply for this credit, it is automatically calculated when you do your taxes.

Medical expenses – You may be able to claim the eligible medical expenses you or your spouse or common-law partner paid in the year.

Canada caregiver credit – You may be able to claim this credit on your return if your spouse or common-law partner, or certain other individuals who depend on you for support, have a mental or physical impairment.

Pension income splitting – You can split your eligible pension income with your spouse or common-law partner to reduce the income tax you may have to pay.

Disability tax credit – If you have a disability, you or your supporting family members could claim a non-refundable tax credit of up to $8,416 to reduce the income tax you or they may have to pay.
